

TWO OBJECTIONS ON FILE WITH THE BOARD

Liquor Cases Will Be Heard by Commissioners—The Courts.

Remonstrances have been filed in the commissioners' court against John W. Durnell, who wants to open a saloon near the old bookrack on the Illinois road and Thomas Stoenie, of the city, and the hearings have been set for Wednesday afternoon and Thursday morning of this week respectively.

J. E. Rundot is objecting to Durnell on the ground that he has not been a resident of the township long enough to entitle him to a license and that he is not the sole owner of the proposed saloon.

The same objections apply to Stoenie and the remonstrance against him is signed by Bernard Roth, Valentine Novitski and Herman Kutzmann.

Lane was charged with drunkenness and put up a bond for his appearance.

MRS. HENRY KLENKE DIES IN LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Victor DePrez, Born on Ocean, No More—The Deaths.

Mrs. Sophia Klenke, wife of Henry Klenke, died Monday morning at the family home, 1417 East Lewis street, after an extended illness from cancer at the age of 63 years, 1 month and 17 days. She had been in failing health for two years, and underwent a surgical operation a year ago.

Mrs. Klenke is survived by the husband, her aged mother, Mrs. Sophia Nahwald, and the following children: Mrs. Minnie Wiesenberg, Fred Klenke, Pearl, Ill.; Henry, William and August Klenke, and a foster-daughter, Hilda Nahwald. There are three grandchildren. The husband is an employee of the Pennsylvania shops.

The deceased was a member of Concordia Lutheran church. Funeral services will be held Thursday.

BROWN.

Mrs. Nina Astory Brown, wife of William C. Brown, died at 12:30 Sunday morning in the Lutheran hospital from complications both antedating and arising from an operation which she underwent nearly four weeks ago.

Early in August Mrs. Brown became the mother of a boy who lived but a day and since that time she had not left her bed. Besides her husband, who is a well known conductor on the Pennsylvania lines, she leaves a little daughter, Margaret, aged 7, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Astory, of 628 Hendricks street. The deceased was born in Mayville, this county, July 20, 1850, and came when very young with her parents to Fort Wayne.

She attended the Fort Wayne public schools, and was graduated from the High school with the class of 1908. In November, 1901, she was united in marriage to the husband who survives her. Mrs. Brown had a lovely personality and an admirable character. She was devoted to her home and family, but yet found time to acquire a large and uncommonly attached circle of friends. She held membership in Allen lodge No. 23, Degree of Honor, and in the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors. She had been a member of Plymouth Congregational church since early in her childhood.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of her parents, 628 Hendricks street. Rev. A. J. Polson, pastor of Plymouth church, will have charge of the services.

Mrs. Jennie M. De Prez, wife of Victor De Prez, died at 6:45 o'clock Sunday evening at the family home, 520 Lusselle street, after an illness which had extended over a period of several months. Mrs. De Prez was 53 years of age.

She was born on the Atlantic ocean while her parents were en route from France to take up their home in America, and had been a resident of Fort Wayne for fifty years. She was a most estimable woman and a member of St. Patrick's Catholic church and of the Rosary society of that congregation.

Surviving relatives include the husband and three daughters—Miss Victorine De Prez, of this city; Mrs. Josephine Kelley and Mrs. Rosie Uley, both of Chicago, and a son, Edward, of this city. Three brothers, John P., Louis and Henry Grim, of Archibolt, O., and one sister, Mrs. Adeline Story, of this city, also survive.

Mrs. William Carter, a pioneer resident of Fort Wayne, who has been very ill for some time, was reported this afternoon to be very near death, and it was feared the end was a matter of but a few hours. The invalid is at the home of her son, William Carter, on West Main street.

WHAT'S DOING IN A POLITICAL WAY

Following the precedent which he set two years ago, Governor Marshall has announced that he will close his speaking campaign in Fort Wayne on Saturday evening, November 5, two days before the election. Arrangements will be made for a monster democratic meeting in this city on that occasion.

Marion D. Johnson, elected secretary of the new Berkeley-Henry Republican club, has discovered that under the law as a member of the board of public safety he is not permitted to participate actively in politics, and is compelled to decline the place.

Congressman Cline and Attorney Carl Yule will address a democratic meeting at Highland Tuesday evening. On Wednesday Mr. Cline and Attorney W. C. Ryan will be the speakers at a democratic meeting at Williamsport, and on Thursday evening Mr. Cline and Mr. Yule will be heard at Edgerton. Friday and Saturday Mr. Cline will attend the corn school at Lagrange, where he will also speak.

Judge Robert S. Taylor, Judge O. N. Houston and Dr. C. B. Stenewer were the speakers at a republican organization meeting at the party headquarters Saturday evening. Judge Taylor urged upon his hearers the importance of the election of republican congressmen this year on account of the proposed tariff commission and legislation for a more elastic currency.

CHIEF WILL INSIST ON CLEAR LINE OF MARCH

Is Arranging for the Parade and Safety of the Public.

"I am going to insist upon having the streets cleared during the Shriner's parade and during most of the week so that the visitors can enjoy themselves and have plenty of room to do it."

"During the parade I am going out myself and I will not allow any rig to stand along the line of march. I will be out in my buggy to give my personal attention to this. I want the people to help me. This will be a big gathering and if I can get enough help from the citizens I think I can send the visitors home with a good opinion of our city."

In addition to these arrangements the chief is taking up the question of public safety and wants the citizens to carefully lock their houses while they are out watching the parade. It is hard to hold a meeting of this kind without having a lot of crooks slip in.

In addition to the regular force the Peopysville and Nickel Plate railroad police will help. Peter Collins, formerly a city detective here, and now an inspector for the Pennsylvania police department, will be here with a squad of his men who will be sworn in.

This squad has been at Pittsburgh and is well acquainted with the best crooks of the country. Capt. Stoll and his men will also take a hand and it is believed that the public will be well guarded during mardi gras week.

SUNDAY GAME IF SERIES IS LONG

Championship Games Must Wait Until the Schedule is Out.

NO ADVANCE WAS MADE FOR TEAMS

Cubs Will Play Out Their Engagements With the Cardinals.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 3.—Games between the Chicago National league team and the Philadelphia Athletics, of the American league, for the world's baseball championship, will begin in the Pennsylvania city on Monday, October 17. This decision was reached by the National commission here today. The other games are scheduled as follows:

Second game, Tuesday, October 18, at Philadelphia.

Wednesday, October 19, teams on railroad going to Chicago.

Third game, Thursday, October 20, at Chicago.

Fourth game Friday, October 21, at Chicago.

Fifth game Saturday, October 22, at Philadelphia.

Sixth game Sunday, October 23, at Chicago.

Place of seventh game, if necessary, to be decided by toss of coin.

The National league umpires will be O'Day and Rigler. The American league umpires will be selected later.

This arrangement of the games means that Owner Stanley Robinson, of the St. Louis Nationals, would not agree to advance his games with the Cubs scheduled for Saturday, October 15. If this had been arranged the series could have started on Saturday and it could have been fixed by playing double-headers on Thursday and Friday.

It means also that the Athletics will be idle from October 8 when they wind up the season with Washington until the first game of the series, covering a period of nine days.

This is the outcome of the long schedule that caused a fight in the National league last spring in New York when a deadlock existed for several days and finally resulted in the adoption of the long schedule.

The National baseball committee met shortly before noon to undertake final arrangements for the world's championship series between the Chicago National league champions and the Athletics, of Philadelphia.

In addition series may be arranged for the Metropolitan championship between the American and National league teams of New York and for the Ohio championship between the Cincinnati and Cleveland teams.

There is a possibility that the commission will before finally adjourning this meeting tomorrow take some notice of the recent reports that a third major league is in process of organization.

D. A. Fletcher, of this city, who attempted to promote a post-season series between all star teams of the two big leagues, has announced that he has obtained the signatures of twenty-nine star players to contracts with the proposed new organization.

A copy of the contract offered to the players has, reached the commission and some pronouncement thereon in the way of an official warning to players listed under the national agreement may be forthcoming.

This matter, however, is more or less subsidiary to the post-season contracts between the two leagues. Chief interest regarding the world's series centered about the choice of time and place for the initial game.

CROSS-QUIT IN GRAFT CASE.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—The defendants in the hearing on charges of conspiracy brought by the Illinois Central railroad against three of its former car officials—George C. Ostermann, president of the Ostermann Car Repair company, who testified that overcharges by his company had been known to the officials. This announcement was a surprise, as it had been expected the attorneys for Frank B. Harriman, Charles Ewing and J. M. Taylor, the three officials accused, would question the car repair official closely.

NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

FIRE VISITS PAYNE; CAUSES BIG LOSS

Two Furniture Stores Burned, and Fort Wayne Girl Has Narrow Escape.

Payne, Ohio, Oct. 2.—The Lamb furniture store building and the greater portion of its contents was destroyed by fire early Sunday morning and the Scudder furniture store was badly damaged, the loss being estimated at $30,000, partly covered by insurance. The extent of the fire was greatly increased by the explosion of gas which had accumulated between the ceiling of the second floor and the roof.

The flames had their start in the M. P. Redman photograph gallery on the second floor of the Lamb building. Mr. Redman had arisen at midnight and had gone to Chicago on the 1:15 Nickel Plate train, and it is thought that he may have left a light burning in his room.

When the alarm was given by Night Watchman Helvie the fire had made great inroads on the building. The officer hurried to awaken Mr. and Mrs. Lamb and, together with their guest, Miss Agnes Ankney, employed as book-keeper in the Wingart grocery at Fort Wayne and residing at 2225 Guy street, they left the burning building in their night clothes, having no time to dress.

A small portion of the household goods was saved, as was about a fourth of the stock in the furniture store.

It took four hours to extinguish the flames. A call for help was sent to Fort Wayne and the department of that city was getting ready and was prepared to send assistance when a telephone message was sent to them that the fire was under control and their services would not be needed.

Mr. Lamb is the heaviest loser. He carried a large stock and his building was worth $7,000. The K. of P. loss will be $500, its lodge rooms being in the building. Mr. Scudder's loss will be $3,000.

DIED FROM PARALYSIS.

Columbia City, Oct. 2.—James Garrison died at his home on North Main street Saturday. Six weeks ago he was stricken with paralysis, which caused his death. He was born in Richmond county, Ohio, Oct. 3, 1831, and was reared on the farm of his father. He came to Whitley county in 1867 and followed the vocation of a farmer.

He Struck the Right Thing

MANY OF THIS LOCALITY CON-TINUE TO PRAISE IT.

About every three months the Root Juice Medicine Company, of Fort Wayne, Ind., has to double its capacity in the manufacture of the famous Root Juice that has made so many remarkable cures throughout the country. We are told that the company is deluged with letters from the afflicted of every part of the United States. Hundreds and hundreds of people write to the company for information, and many of them send money through the mail, as there is no agency in their locality. Since Bradley Bros. got the agency at this point hundreds of people have bought the remedy, and as the Root Juice business here is not above the average, the inventor of the remedy is certainly being rewarded. But such should be the case, as the medicine gives wonderful satisfaction and seems to permanently cure some of the most stubborn stomach, liver and kidney troubles, rheumatism and nervous weakness. Many people living at this point and vicinity, whom we know, have called at the drug store to express their thanks for the great good Root Juice has done for them. Among the many whom Root Juice has cured was Joseph Simpson. He said: "I had a complication of stomach, liver and kidney troubles, of long standing. I suffered very much and used many different medicines, without being benefited. But I tell you, I struck the right thing when I got Root Juice, as three bottles of the great medicine has entirely cured me." Hardly a day passes without some one calling at the drug store to praise the medicine.

HUNTINGTON WILL ENTERTAIN THE C. E.

Preparations Being Made for the Fort Wayne District Meeting
There.

Huntington, Ind., Oct. 2.—Huntington is to entertain a district convention of Christian Endeavorers in November with Karl Lehman, Interstate field secretary, as the chief speaker on the program, which will last for two days. Such action was decided upon at a meeting of C. E. workers held at the Central Christian church parlors. Representatives from all the societies in the city except one were present and all were heartily in favor of the plan of entertaining the convention here. It has been six years since Huntington has entertained the convention and it is now time for this city to take the meeting, which the workers were quite anxious to do.

Present at the meeting was Irving E. Bitner, of Fort Wayne, district secretary, and he explained what would be required in entertaining the convention. At the close of the conference an organization was perfected for the convention. Miss Ella Moore, of the Central Christian society, being named as the general chairman in charge of all the committees.

The convention will begin on Thanksgiving evening with registration and reception of delegates in the afternoon. It will continue through the day and Friday, closing with a big evening meeting at one of the big city churches. Some fine speakers will be secured and an excellent program is assured. There will probably be about one hundred delegates. The territory embraces Adams, Allen, Wells, Huntington and Whitley counties.

TAX LOWERED ONE CENT.

The City Tax Levy Made by Council of Bluffton.

Bluffton, Ind., Sept. 2.—The general tax levy for the year as fixed by the city council is 34 cents, which is one cent lower than last year. Other taxes remain the same as last year and are as follows: Street lighting purposes, 20 cents; fire protection, 20 cents; outstanding bonds, 15 cents.

The lowering of the general tax includes the purchase of a street flusher and team at a cost of $1,200, the drilling of two more deep water wells and the raising of the salaries of several city officers, which was done several months ago.

A special tax of 65 cents on the $100 was levied on all real estate to pay for the intersections of the new paved streets.

WHITLEY PROHIBITIONISTS

Nominated County Ticket—Rev. B.
Sawyer Made Address.

Columbia City, Ind., Oct. 2.—The prohibitionists of the county met Saturday afternoon at the assembly room of the court house and completed their county ticket.

Eugene Chaver, of Washington township, was named for auditor; W. J. Deems, of Jefferson township, for coroner; Clayton Smith, of Jefferson township, Alva Marrs, of Troy township, and John Waterfall, of this city, for councilmen at large; Henry A. Smith, councilman First district; Loren Humbarger, Second district; J. C. Leininger, Third district; John Baumgardner, Fourth district.

Benjamin Sawyer, of Fort Wayne, candidate for congress on the prohibition ticket, delivered an address. He told of the work the party was doing in the district and the state and gave a strong argument in favor of his views.

Motor racing and aviation will ward on from Malthusian evils even if Andy

Carnegie does finally abolish war.

President Taft defines a progressive republican as a man who is not radical and who is not ultra-conservative.

That would almost fit a description of Summy Jim Sherman by himself.

Mayor Gaynor has returned to his job of governing New York after two months of illness caused by an attempt to assassinate him. There is not a little curiosity to see whether Mayor

Gaynor will press the crusade against vice and its police department protections that Acting Mayor John Furrber Mitchell so courageously inaugurated and so ably pressed. Acting Mayor

Mitchell got some distinct results that ought not to be lost to the people of

New York.

The chief cause of the present embarrassment of Senator Billy Lorimer seems to be that some of his friends were too careless in the matter of taking money. A Lorimer democrat in the Illinois legislature simply had no discretion at all when he gazed at currency. They were taking it in wads and gobs, bundles and bales, and with no concern for whom they might donate.

But none of it was to pay for voting for Billy. If these gentlemen had been more careful the great beneficiary of their unsought and unbought favor would now be spared much pain and perhaps his log.

Fort Wayne again becomes host this week and, unless all signs fail, to one of the largest and most interesting gatherings the city has ever entertained.

The Mardi Gras festival of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine gives promise of spectacular and picturesque features equal to any ever seen in the north and the presence of a crowd of visitors that will put the city's capacity to furnish entertainment to some streets. However, no one will suffer any deprivations and all who come will be made welcome. More and more

Fort Wayne is appreciated as a good town to go to and a hard town to leave. This week's entertainment will fulfill every expectation and satisfy every desire, for the Shriners are sparing nothing.

The law will be all that Mr. Bumble said it was if it do not soon place

some interdiction upon the slaughter of human beings in automobile races.

That annual outbreak of lunacy known in sporting and mortuary annals as the "Vanderbilt cup race," ought to be prohibited by statute. To deliberately plan such an event with its tragic accompaniment of murdering and maiming is to plan crime. Saturday's racing on Long Island cost several lives and inflicted permanent injuries on several others. Not a single useful purpose is served by this sacrifice of life and limb. The speed maniacs risk their necks for good pay, no doubt, and may consider the safety of their bones a private matter with which the public has no right to meddle. But there is a moral side to these exhibitions quite as much as there is a moral

BACHELOR OF PHILOSOPHY AS CABIN BOY GOES 15,000 MILES

HERR PAUL WEINBERG AND CHOW DOG.

On board the German steamship Vandana, unloading a cargo from the far east and the Bush docks, in South Brooklyn, there is a "cabin boy" whose station in life is not at all in keeping with the lowly position he holds aboard the old, weather-beaten freighter.

He is Herr Paul Weinberg, bachelor of philosophy, student of medicine and with only one more year to study in the famous Berlin university before he will be a full-fledged physician.

Herr Weinberg, in the regulation white coat of steward of the steamship, told the story of his world wanderings in search of experience and his interest in the scenes and sights along the 15,000-mile journey that he has just completed on the Vandana.

"I still have a year to study before I could secure my final degree," said the young man to a reporter, "when the wanderlust struck me. I always had a great desire to see the world, and I knew of no better way of seeing a large portion of it free than to work on a far east freighter and trust to my education to make my life aboard ship as pleasant as possible.

"There are many young men who ship as cabin boys and then take life easy on board, the signing of the articles being merely a formality to conform with the shipping laws. But I thought that by actually performing my duties as cabin boy I could retain my own self-respect and yet gain still greater experience.

"I did not make any mistake, for I was treated splendidly by all on board. I have cleaned the main saloon and waited at table, and I have really enjoyed the experience very much. I have seen everything there was to be seen at the many ports at which a far east freighter stops, and I have visited many hospitals and gathered much data there which I can use later in both my studies and in my practice.

"I was in America once before, about five years ago, but then I came as a passenger on one of the liners. I did not enjoy this one, for I have the satisfaction of knowing that I could adapt myself to circumstances and perform work that I would have thought impossible some years ago. It has made me self-reliant, independent, and very much more sanguine of my future.

On the long voyage from the orient one of Herr Weinberg's greatest pleasures was the brace of chow dogs owned by the Vandana's chief officer. He taught them many tricks and was their constant companion.

In New York young Weinberg intends to attend several clinics, visit the hospitals and gain such other medical knowledge as he thinks will come in handy when he returns to Germany in about three months to resume his studies at the Berlin university.

SOME DISEASES THAT BAFLE MEDICAL WORLD

The medical men of the world have gone a long way on the trail of disease since Galen begged the bodies of condemned murderers for dissection at the very beginning of the art of healing. The microscope, the test tube and the chemical tests have hunted many of the disease germs down and marked them so that even the most humble practitioner knows them by sight when he finds them in his patient's arteries.

So far, despite all their successes, the cause of cancer has eluded the most painstaking search. It still slays its victims by the thousand in every community of the world. The cancer zones that lie about many cities of the old and the new world show no signs of growing smaller. Microscopic test tube and germ cultures are alike hopeless when the purple plague makes its appearance.

The latest of the medical mysteries to make its appearance in the new world is pellagra, the scourge of the Italian peninsula for over two centuries. For a hundred years America had been congratulating herself that in spite of the corn diet of a large number of her people she had never developed a case of pellagra. A large part of the population in the south had eaten corn in various forms ever since the settlement of the country. No ill effects were noted up till about ten years ago. Then a disease appeared in some of the hospitals of the nation both north and south of the Mason and Dixon line. Reluctantly the medical men began to admit the presence of the disease that had flourished so long in Italy. So far the cause of the disorder has not been determined with any exactness. A thousand rumors fill the medical journals, and various opinions are expressed in the meetings of the medical associations. In the meantime the disease is on the increase. The rate hospital for the insane at Peoria, Ill., is badly infected. Many of the cases are of long standing, most of the patients being pellagrins before the date of their admission to the hospital. Recent outbreaks are reported from the insane asylums of Ohio and the private hospitals in and near Fort Worth, Texas.

The medical world at present is much alarmed over the spread of that weird and dangerous disease, infantile paralysis. Its cause and course of attack are practically unknown. The doctors seem helpless to check its course. In fact, they have but little time between the moment the child falls in convulsions and the hour when death ends its sufferings. So far there have been few if any cases in or near this city. It is not counted contagious, but seems epidemic to a certain degree. It does not confine its attack to children alone, but has been known to cause the death of men and women of mature age. So far no method of checking it effectively has been devised. The germ has never been isolated. Every doctor in the country who has had a case of it is doing his best to solve the mystery of the origin of the dreadful disease. The disease has been widely scattered in Illinois and the states farther east during the present summer. It has approached within fifty or sixty miles of St. Louis, but has not shown any disposition to become dangerously epidemic as yet. Fame awaits the man who isolates the germ and perfects a serum that will do for infantile paralysis what Flexner's serum has done for cerebro-spinal meningitis.

by the health officers of the port in pursuit of their precautions against possible cholera, was this morning allowed to proceed to his pier. Two deaths had occurred on board during her voyage, but neither of these was found to be of a nature to warrant the vessel's further detention. Five of her steerage passengers, however, were sent to Hoffman island for observation.

The steamer Pergula, from Naples and other Italian ports was still at quarantine when the Lapland got away, being detained to await the result of the bacteriological examination in the case of one of the members of her crew, a quartermaster, who was ill when the vessel reached port Saturday night.

DIFFERING VIEWS OF PRESS.

Madrid Newspapers Opinions of the Sunday Manifestations.

Madrid, Oct. 3.—The liberal press today congratulates Premier Canalejas and interprets the generally peaceful character of yesterday's manifestation as demonstrating the democracy and liberality of his political policies.

The clerical press claims that the parades showed the strength and the earnestness of the movement in protest against the government's reactionary reform program.

The gatherings at Seville, Santander and Valencia ended with encounters between Catholics and anti-clericals, during which gloves were thrown and a score of people injured. The police put a stop to the disorders. The Biscayan Catholic committee is arranging for a great manifestation at Madrid and is inviting the Catholics from all other provinces to participate.

SAILOR OF BATTLE SHIP KANSAS A REAL HERO

Loses His Life in Trying to Save Young Lady from Drowning in Hudson.

New York, Oct. 3.—While trying to aid Ensign Charles Talley Blackburne, of the battleship Kansas, save a young woman from drowning in the Hudson river today, a sailor believed to be Eugene Audit, of the Kansas, was drowned.

Blackburne and Audit jumped to the rescue of the woman, one of a party returning from a visit to the warship, when she missed her footing as she was stepping from the launch to a float and with a scream pitched headlong into the water.

Blackburne reached the struggling woman and managed to swim with her to the float where they were hauled ashore. Audit was caught in the swift current. The young woman was taken to a waiting automobile and hurried away. Her identity was not revealed.

Queen Mary's acceptance of a fan to be presented by the Fannmakers' company on the occasion of the coronation, has given that ancient body the liveliest satisfaction. On the occasion of Queen Victoria's jubilee and at the coronation of Queen Alexandra the company was privileged to make similar gifts, and thus to bring to public notice the fact that fanmaking was once a great industry in the city of London. The Fannmakers is probably the only city company which may be said to concern itself directly with women's finery, and it is most appropriate that it should make an offering to the queen on her coronation. TOLSTOI DOES NOT LIKE OUR GREAT COLONEL

Russian Thinks Him a Bit
Superficial—America
a Wonder Land.

(Correspondence.)

St. Petersburg, Oct. 3.—A. N. Rubakin, political writer for the Novoe Vremya, has interviewed Count Tolstoy on American and Theodore Roosevelt in particular. The Russian author regards America as a "boiling magic pot—a fairyland and the cradle of new human experiments."

Commenting on Colonel Roosevelt's criticism of his works, the count says he was surprised to find the former president so superficial and shallow in his judgment.

The count declares he always has entertained a high opinion of Roosevelt as a peacemaker, but does not favor his imperialistic policy and his attempt to abolish the freedom of the press. The interviewer found the Russian commoner in his library working on what he called his "last novel."

Talked of Fiction in America. "We talked of present literary tendencies in Russia and abroad and also of the fiction of America," says Rubakin. "What is your general opinion of America?" was the interviewer's first question.

The count replied, after some hesitation: "I could write a large book on that subject. But since you desire to hear in a few words my views of the new world, I must say America always has looked to me like a boiling magic pot, a regular fairyland. You know if you ask a Russian peasant what he thinks about America he will reply that America is a country of plagues and giants, an island of demons and angels—something beyond his actual comprehension."

"America to me looks like a new stage of historic dramas, the cradle of new human experiments. I always have been a staunch admirer of its public men, its cosmopolitan spirit, and its optimism. What wonderful statesmen and men of action it has produced! Jefferson, Franklin, Lincoln, Washington—those men were giants."

"I imagine the typical American is an alert, optimistic toiler whose success and ideals of life are in his work, no matter whether that work is for the good or harm of his fellow men. It is a quality we Russians lack entirely. I have known scores of such Americans personally. What for a Russian is fascinating and dramatic usually is for an American monotonous and uncomprehensible."

"Action, action, action." "Action, action, action. That is the whole thing in an American novel, and therefore it reads to a Russian shallow, unpsychologic and boyish."

"If an American cannot reason out a subject he hates it. Therefore everything must be obvious and tangible. For a Russian religion must be mysterious and symbolic, allegoric and poetic. He likes to feel religion. The American wants a religion he can thoroughly understand."

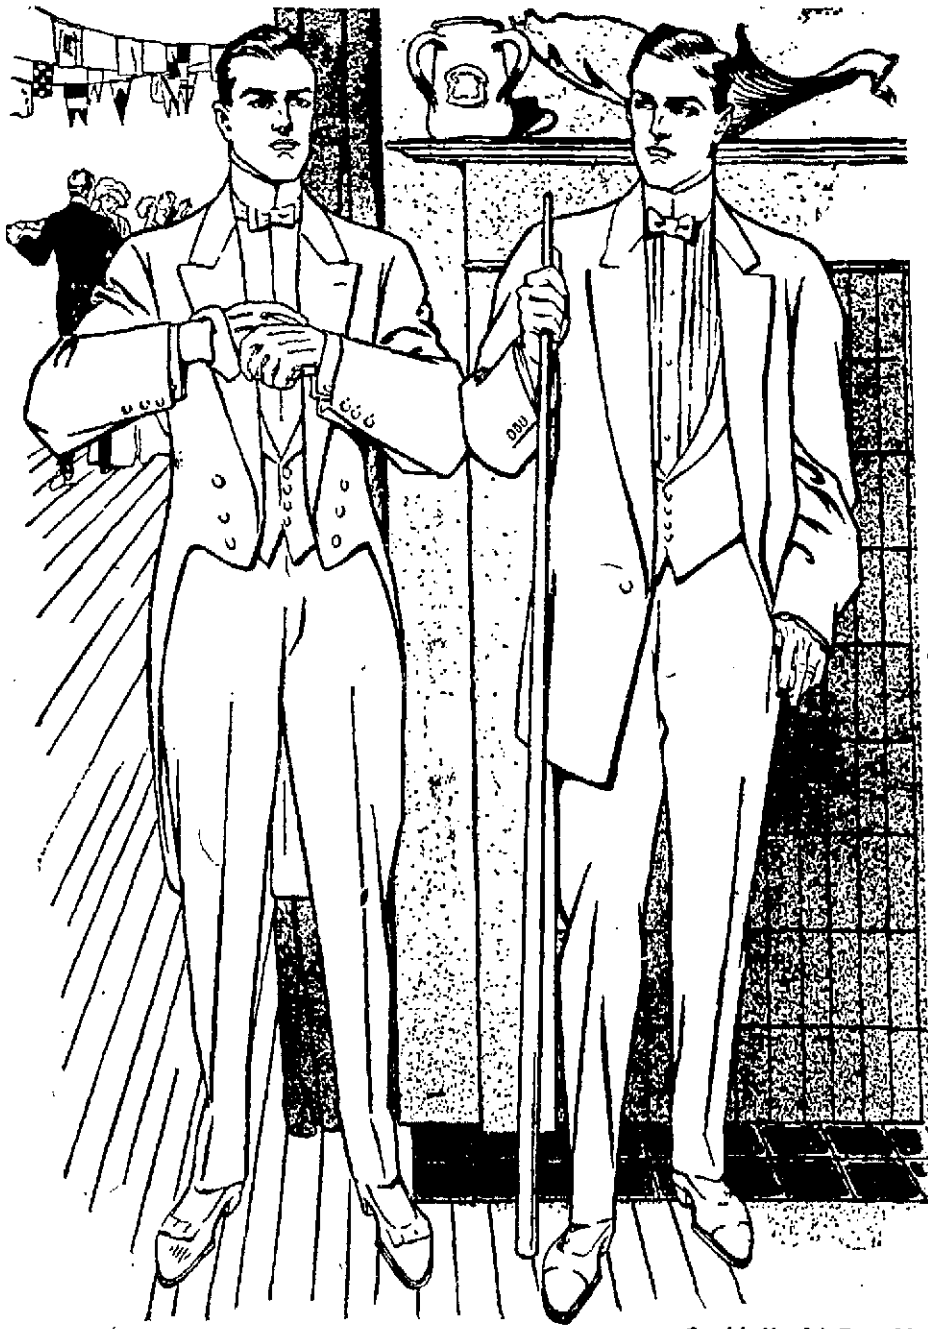

M. Rubakin asked the count's opinion of Roosevelt.

"I never express an opinion about living men, regardless of how much I admire or despise them," replied the count. "I often have been asked what I think about the czar, but I never have given an opinion."

"But you could give an opinion of Roosevelt as a fellow craftsman, and what you think of his political tendencies from a distance," persisted the interviewer.

"Yes, that is different," said Tolstoy. "I read Roosevelt's condemning criticism of my work published last year. I was surprised to see Colonel Roosevelt so superficial and shallow in his judgment of my works. He says in a few sentences that my writings are grossly immoral and have done more harm than good. I was deeply affected on reading that, for I had written with the opposite purpose in view."

"My idea in writing was to show how bad it is to follow our selfish in-

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

What the Sentinel Had to Say About Persons and Events Twenty-Five Years Ago.

Postmaster Knough has just received a large supply of postal cards, and those in want of them can now be supplied.

One of the most enthusiastic meetings in Pythian circles took place last night at the castle hall of Fort Wayne lodge, for the purpose of organizing another uniformed division. The following officers were selected: H. Goldsmith, chairman; D. A. Levison, secretary; Perry DeHaven, treasurer; E. S. Philley, G. W. Wilson, L. K. Eaton and E. K. Cosgrove, trustees.

Marriage license: James M. McKay and Elizabeth J. McKee, Henry Wille and Wilhelmina Ostermeyer.

Louis Centlivre was twenty-eight years old yesterday, and last evening his friends tendered him a reception at the French brewery parlors. The merry throng wished the young gentleman all manner of good things, and danced the hours away until quite late.

Dr. B. S. Woodworth, asks Mayor Muhler if there would be any objection to the Maumee Monumental association erecting a statue to General Anthony Wayne on the site of the old fort, on East Main street. Mayor Muhler will ask the council about the matter.

There are 1,300 waterworks permits issued by Clerk McDonald, of the department.

Col. D. N. Foster, G. A. R., department commander of Indiana, has issued a circular levying 15 cents on each soldier for the purpose of erecting a monument to General Grant. He instructs that the money be paid or sent to Assistant Adjutant General Tom Sullivan, of this city.

DIVORCE TOO EASY HERE, SAYS PRELATE

That the prevalence of divorce in the United States is due to the ease with which it may be obtained in certain of the states, and the tendency of the people to take advantage of it, is the opinion of the Rt. Rev. John Wadsworth, lord bishop of Salisbury, England. Bishop Wadsworth, who has come to this country to attend the Tercentenary Protestant Episcopal general conference at Cincinnati on October 8, is the guest of the Rev. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity church, New York.

"Are you to speak upon the divorce question at the conference?" he was asked.

"I shall certainly touch upon the subject," he said. "But I think that the stand of the Church of England upon that matter is too well known for me to elaborate upon it."

"You see, I will have but this one chance to speak to an assembly of practically the entire clergy of the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States, together with representative laymen, and I have a great many subjects upon which I wish to talk."

"But the divorce question is such a crying evil in this country that you must take some steps to cure it, or at least to govern and restrain it to some extent. It gives me great satisfaction to learn that the tendency is to place some sort of federal restraint upon the matter and to make it an affair of a central national court, instead of leaving it to the whims and vagaries of individual states."

"Irresponsible persons, I really do not know who they are, are now trying to obtain greater facilities for divorce in England. We have only one court there at the present time which has the power to grant divorces, but these persons are trying to make it lawful for county magistrates to grant them. The church is fighting against such action, which would surely increase the number of divorces, no matter how severe the judges might be. When it is possible to go to law easily, people are bound to take advantage of it, which is just what has happened in this country of yours."

POSTAL BONDS TO BE SURPRISE.

Design Utterly Different From Anything That Has Gone Before.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Designs of the new postal savings bank bonds have been approved by Secretary MacVaugh, and by the time the postal banks begin to receive deposits the treasury department will be ready to issue the new securities, if any are demanded.

The new bonds are entirely different from anything the government has issued.

INFLAMED KIDNEYS

Medical writers declare it incurable after the sixth month whether albuminous or not.

The average man prefers to think of it as "kidney trouble" and lets it go, but the census shows this appalling fact: out of 22,000 deaths from kidney troubles the last census year over nine-tenths of them (20,000) took the form called "Bright's Disease" although it is quite probable that nine-tenths of these up to the last moment thought of it as and called it "kidney trouble" when as a matter of fact the only possible hope laid through a specific for Bright's Disease.

There never was one until Fulton worked out his Renal emollient (Fulton's Renal Compound).

Since then inflammation of the kidneys whether albuminous or not, or whether called "kidney trouble" or "Bright's Disease" or whether six months or six years old commonly yields. If you have had kidney trouble over six months no matter what you call it it is the only hope. Endurance 87% where patients do not wait until bedridden a tough some of them recover. ITCHING RASH ON FACE AND NECK

Cured—Scratched Until Face was Mass of Raw Flesh—Used Cuticura and had First Good Night's Sleep in 3 Months.

"An itching rash broke out on my face and neck, so bad that I scratched it until my face was a mass of raw flesh which kept me awake all night. After going to my family doctor, he not helping me, I tried another doctor but without success. After doctors failing, a friend recommended the Cuticura Remedies. That night, after washing my face and neck with Cuticura Soap, I applied some Cuticura and had the first good night's sleep in three months. I used about two lots of Cuticura Soap and Ointment when you could not see a mark on my face or neck. I will gladly recommend the Cuticura Remedies to anybody." Wm. Silver, 346 West 35th St., New York, Mar. 1, 1910.

In another letter Mr. Silver says, "My case was of about two years standing. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment for about three days I saw a decided improvement and was entirely cured in two months."

For the prevention and treatment of itching, burning, scaling eruptions and the promotion of permanent skin and hair health, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are absolutely unrivaled in purity, efficiency and economy. SMART WAIST FOR WINTER.

By MRS. JANE FORD.

6 SIZES 32 TO 42 BUST.

In spite of the well deserved popularity of the one-piece frocks, the separate waist again has an important place in the world of fashion. After all, for general wear, there is nothing else so practical, because living in steam heated houses, as most of us do nowadays, waists of heavy goods, such as one uses for a winter suit, are uncomfortable. The waist model pictured is plain but smart looking and will be becoming to the majority of women. Those who wish to copy it can get the pattern in six sizes that run from thirty-two to forty-two inches bust measure. To make it for the average person one and seven-eighths yards of thirty-six inch material will be needed. Of contrasting material, for the yoke and sleeves, it will be necessary to have one and three-quarters yards eighteen inches wide.

The waist is of the one-piece order, that is, without seams at the shoulders, and it has broad Gibson tucks stitched the full length of the back and yoke depth at the front which relieve the plain broad effect that is often seen in waists of this type, and which, as a rule, is not becoming.

This waist developed in silk and buckram, or chiffon, laid over a silk lining, would be lovely worn with a coat suit for afternoon or evening functions. To get the most satisfactory results, the waist should match in color the material of the suit. If it is not possible to get the yoke and sleeve material of the same shade the goods may be bought in white or ecru and dyed the desired shade. Some women prefer to do this because it is much less trouble and often more satisfactory than shopping around trying to match colors.

The frill at the front may be of the yoke material, knife pleated, or it can be of lace. The arrangement of trimming gives opportunity to use, without cutting, a bit of real lace one may have on hand. A waist of plum colored silk and chiffon recently seen had cleverly draped as a finish an old Duchess lace handkerchief. In place of the buttons small cameo pins caught it at the yoke and point.

"IS MARRIAGE A FAILURE?"

Coming to the Majestic for Three Days, Starting Wednesday.

For those desiring to pass an afternoon or evening of real enjoyment, with laughter and a touch here and there of drama will certainly feel badly if they miss seeing "Is Marriage a Failure?" It is a comedy dealing with matrimony and its troubles, causing complication upon complication between the wife and the husband, the mother-in-law, the father-in-law, the uncle-in-law and the aunt-in-law, which causes much laughter, but at the same time everything that occurs is not exaggerated, but done in the regular walks of life.

E. C. Burnett in securing the exclusive rights to this play, also secured the services of Mr. Ernest Anderson and Miss Madge Burt, who have been especially engaged for the principal roles, and to support them they have approved of the following artists: J. Roy Clair, Edwin A. Darby, H. L. Barker, Mrs. Atkinson, Katherine Cromwell, J. R. Dunn, Eldridge Greene, Bessie L. Syder, each one being selected especially for the character he or she portrays.

Those "Different" Hats of Ours

The true secret of being best dressed is to be dressed a little different without materially deviating from prevailing styles.

A hat may be perfectly stylish, yet, if many women wear the same kind, it is common. That sort of a hat classes you as a follower, instead of a leader in dress.

We appreciate this fully and while our comprehensive stock of new millinery includes every favored model, the hats shown possess the charm of "differentness." Little dainty touches, quaint tiltings and dentings, roguishly cocked plumes, captivating bows and tastily disposed trimmings, in endless variations, lend them an almost indefinable, yet distinctive air of superiority to the hats shown elsewhere.

Our hats are "different" in price, too. We have never been in a position to assert with more confidence that equal values cannot be had at our prices.

-OSTRICH GOODS-

Our stock is complete, including Royal French Curl, Willow Plumes, Tips, Ostrich Bands and Pompons and new novelties.

All our feathers are carefully selected of a brilliant and beautiful fast black which insures a beautiful feather that will wear for years.

pany. It is a rural playlet that has been received with great favor in all the largest cities east and west and will prove one of the best things ever seen at the Temple.

The rest of the big bill for this week is strictly high class as the management spared no money to get the best talent procurable and should prove even better than last week's excellent bill. Mullen and Correll, the conversational comedy acrobats, will be another feature. The act was the hit of the bill at the big Majestic theater, Chicago, last week. The Sully Family, five in number, will present a new comedy sketch entitled "January Second." Eddie Gray, "the tall tale teller," is a monologist that has a line of talk the eastern critics declare the funniest ever. Galvin and Platt will present a pretty little playlet entitled "The Stolen Kid." The Church City Four come recommended as the best singing four in vaudeville. Al Harrington, "the Lazy Janitor," together with the motion pictures showing a good comedy complete the excellent bill that should pack the house at every performance.

Specialist Tells

When Woman May Wear False Hair

Only When Restoring Color of Hair Tresses Lost By Bleaching, Dyeing or Sunburn.

"There is just one time when I believe in a woman wearing false hair," declared the visiting hair specialist, as she massaged vigorously, "and that is when a woman has lost the original color of her hair, either through bleaching, dyeing or sunburn, and is trying to hasten restoration. She can do this only by copious use of oil in some form or another, and that doesn't tend to make her look very well. But, if she adopts a certain style of coiffure she may cover her own locks and have them as greasy as she pleases the while."

"Incidentally," she went on, changing the treatment to brushing, "false hair wouldn't be injurious if the wearer of it took care to counteract its effect upon the scalp. I think I'll have to give you a lecture on that before long. Now I'm going to talk of restoring color, because the season has come around when it must be done. There is always more demand in late summer and early autumn for such information. Funny, isn't it?"

"As I said before, oil is the thing to use, and this you will understand when you know that loss of color, in the three instances I have mentioned, is due to lack of natural oils which nourish the hair follicles. Without their natural food the roots are impoverished, and the hair is dry and lifeless. Castor oil is great food. It has an unpleasant odor, but if lavender oil is added its efficacy is not impaired and the natural odor is lost. Another, an ointment well suited to a dried scalp, is made of equal parts of oil of eucalyptus and mercury oleate. Still another is more elaborate, but it can be made at home.

"There are needed four ounces of beef marrow, melted and strained; three ounces of pure leaf lard, also melted and strained; one and one-quarter ounces of sweet almond oil, three-quarters of a dram of Peru balsam, one dram of chinchona bark and one-half dram each of oil of cloves and lavender.

"The hair is put into the fats before straining and the mixture is placed where it will be warm, but not hot, for a day. The Peru balsam is added to the almond oil and the two liquids are strained after combining, the perfumed oils going in last.

"Any one of these tonics is to be put on the head at night, and in much larger quantities than they ordinarily would be. You see, you've got to make up the deficit, and this is where false hair comes in. You can have your head fairly reeking with oil and it will never show if a swirl or coronet braid is planned on or a bunch of puffs ornaments your crown. Don't think it enough just to put on the oil. It must be well rubbed into the scalp. Friction and the heat generated by it help it to absorb. At night brush your hair well. The color won't come back in a week, but it will return in less time, and the hair be of better quality than if nothing had been done.

"There now, your treatment for today is over."

RHEUMATISM

PURIFYING THE BLOOD
THE ONLY PERMANENT CURE

No case of Rheumatism was ever cured except by a thorough purification of the blood; just as long as the blood remains charged with fermenting uric acid poison, the painful disease will continue. The pains and aches of Rheumatism are simply superficial effects of the impurities in the circulation, and sometimes may be temporarily relieved by the application of plasters, liniments, hot cloths, etc. But the person who trifles with this dangerous disease by depending on local treatment alone, is certain to pay for the mistake with constant suffering later on. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism in the only way it is possible to cure the disease. It goes down into the blood, and removes the uric acid from the circulation, so that the nerves, bones, muscles and joints are lubricated and fed with nourishing elements instead of being continually irritated and inflamed with the sharp, uratic impurity. When S. S. S. has cleansed and purified the blood, the pains and aches cease, all inflammation disappears, stiffened muscles are made pliant, and every troublesome symptom of Rheumatism is permanently corrected. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice free to all who write.

ANYTHING BUT FUN IN A CLOWN'S LIFE

He Who Makes Good in the Circus Today Must Be Clever and Original, a Creator and Actor and, Above All, He Must Be Industrious.

"Tired? Well, I should say I am. This is harder than heaving lump coal or spring moving. The old days of much ease and great glory are planted in history, never to be resurrected again."

A sad-faced clown in the dressing room of a big circus was wiping off the old lines of joy on his face and making vicious swipes at the stubborn coating of white which seemed to adhere like varnish.

"We work harder than any bunch of men with the show," the clown continued. "I have been in the business a long, long while now and I know whereof I speak. I can remember when the functions of this great institution of clowning were short and sweet and life was one long, rosy dream. That's when your granddaddy was buying the pastebord in the 'pay-as-you-enter' one ring circus."

"All the clown had to do was to tumble into the sawdust arena and carry on a few silly antics while the lady bareback rider was doing her stunt. Then when the panting horse was getting a breath, Mr. Clown would step out and pull a joke on the ringmaster and then beat it around the ring as the distinguished ringmaster cracked a long whiff after him at every jump."

"But look at things nowadays! Ten times as much is demanded. Look at this very show! We have thirty-three clowns, and every one of them a hard worker. To make good we must rank in ability with many of the so-called musical comedy comedians along Broadway. Not only must we be up in the art of pantomime, but must pos-

Rheumatic Poison

Rheuma Drives It From the System and Cures Rheumatism.

Ever since Meyer Bros. Co. secured the privilege of handling Rheuma in Fort Wayne, the sales have been very large.

This is due to the fact that Rheuma really does cure Rheumatism, and that it is guaranteed to cure Rheumatism or money back.

It's a quick acting remedy, too. You don't have to wait a long while for results. For Rheuma starts at once to act on the kidneys, liver, bowels and blood, and before 24 hours the poisonous Uric Acid, which causes Rheumatism, has begun to pass out of the body through the regular channels.

One 50 cent bottle will prove to any Rheumatic sufferer that Rheuma surely will cure Rheumatism.

sess a pair of leather-lined lungs for the successful exploitation of our jokes. "But, above all, we must be original—a talent not demanded of the man cast for a musical comedy role. Their parts are created; their lines are cast; they are drilled by a competent stage manager, and even their costumes are minutely described by the author. But the live clown of today must be a creator and actor as well. Likewise, it must be a creation with the breath of today in it—pertinent, topical, new, and with a broad sense of humor in its freshness. We must consume at least half of the time of the entire performance."

"There are a few things I want to call your attention to in this very show, and, mind you, it is not the exception. For instance, two clowns put on a screamingly funny burlesque of the Jeffries-Johnson fight. One has the white face of a lily, while the other is of an ebony hue. They carry on a fake fight and when the round is over one of them runs over and rings a cow bell. Instead of pouring water on the head of Johnson it is splashed on his big feet. Other things equally as ridiculous are carried on."

"To be sure, we have a travesty on Roeland's much talked of play, 'Chanticleer.' One clown, representing the moon, carries things at a high clip when in stalks the giant rooster, Chanticleer. A tramp, asleep on a park bench, represents Morning. Chanticleer crows and daylight is on. A big policeman arrests the moon and takes him out. The tramp awakes and stretching his arms and legs to the accompaniment of a wooden rattler, gapes and yawns in stentorian fashion, and the birds begin to sing. Very broad burlesque, you will say, but carried out with a degree of intelligence and close to the text, in a way. And it's all done in a minute."

"Of course, we give aviation an inning. One clown has a miniature aeroplane on the end of a pole hanging in front of him, the pole being fastened to his head, and blowing a bellows he keeps the aeroplane in motion in an imaginary chase after it. Neither have we overlooked the Bailey comet. An ingenious chap with our aggregation has arranged a comet on wires that hangs about three feet in front of him and two feet above his head. For a sizzling tail of cyanogen he has a ignited piece of fireworks, like a fuse, which gives the whole a realistic appearance. Then he has a large funnel shaped telescope made of crude tinplate, and armed with this the clown struts around the arena, comet gazing. It is so grand now that it always gets a good laugh."

"Of course, we have Teddy and his return from the African jungles depicted in humorous fashion, and even the high cost of living comes in for its share of ridicule. But, you see, all of these things call for originality and hard work. The prosperous and successful clown of today must be up and doing, alive to every situation and exceedingly clever in the humorous exposition of popular fads and fancies. And, above everything else, he must be industrious."

OVER SEVENTY MEN DIE IN MEXICAN COAL MINE

Explosion Causes Disaster in Shaft—Effort to Rescue Fails.

Monterey, Mexico, Oct. 3.—Latest news from the coal mine at Palau, where an explosion occurred Friday night, indicates that the loss of life will probably be seventy-two miners, mostly Mexicans and Japanese. Only two bodies have thus far been recovered, owing to the presence of poisonous gases. The force of the explosion blew down all of the timbers in the slope from the sixth lift to the surface. It blew out the mouth of the slope, lifting twenty feet of surface, closing the mine. The fan house was also blown down, but the fan and engine were not injured. Entrance was made to the mine through the second opening, but all the ventilating currents and air stepping being destroyed, it was impossible to penetrate into the mine far enough to reach any of the miners.

The first rescue party was overcome and a second party had to go in and relieve them. They were overcome by afterdamp, but were brought to the surface and recovered in a few hours. The work of restoring the air currents is proceeding as rapidly as possible with all the men that it is safe to work. Two bodies have so far been recovered and there are about seventy more men in the mine. There is no possibility of the men being recovered alive, as it will be forty-eight hours more before all the bodies can be reached. The neighboring mines have all sent their superintendents with picked men and all have aided faithfully in the rescue work.

The rescue helmets, of which the company has a full supply, could not be used as they were so heavy and the space left to crawl through so small that the men could not get through with them on.

This mine was the largest producer of the Coahuila Coal company and has been shipping about 18,000 tons of coal per month for some years. The cause of the explosion is not known.

WOULD ABOLISH THE QUEUE.

Through Wu Ting Fang Chinese Memorialize Throne.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Memorializing the throne at Peking in favor of abolishing the queue, Wu Ting Fang, the former minister to Washington, who kept Americans busy answering his questions while he was at his post, has explained how he happened to take that attitude. In his memorial, the text of which has just reached Washington, Mr. Wu says Chinese residents in North, Central and South America have been mocked and teased by foreigners until they implored him to seek an imperial edict giving official sanction to cropping the hair and changing their costume to accord with western ideas.

All through Mexico, Peru and Cuba, where he visited as minister, he found the Chinese sincerely loyal and patriotic, but eight or nine-tenths of them had divested themselves of their queues or had secreted them by coiling them on the tops of their heads. They told him they had found the hanging down of the queues was inconvenient, soiled their clothes and endangered them in many factories and mills. The minister admonished them for changing their costumes, which he regarded as a sacred part of the government institution, but agreed to the "hald facts" concerning the queues, the elimination of which he prays for.

PUBLIC TREASURER WANTS A CLEAN CURRENCY

Lee McClung Would Like to See Our Rag Money Made Sanitary.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Lee McClung, treasurer of the United States, wants to see a sanitary currency. In his annual report he recommends that the government increase its facilities for exchanging worn and dirty bills for crisp new ones and suggests that the public might be willing to share the expense of doing so.

Treasurer McClung makes a radical recommendation that the national banks be obliged to deposit an additional five per cent redemption fund for their notes early in January each year, in addition to the 5 per cent now required all year round. He declares that during January, April, May, June and July the regular 5 per cent fund is not enough, because of the drains upon it. Consequently, the treasury has to advance money for the banks.

Such advances are taken up again when the redemptions come off. As the notes are obligations of the banks and not the government, Mr. McClung recommends that the banks be required to deposit more money to cover them.

The balance of the report is devoted to a complete review of the finances of the United States treasury during the fiscal year 1916, which closed on June 30.

During the year the government took in from ordinary sources $675,511,715, the largest sum in its history. The revised estimates placed the total stock of money of the United States in existence at $34,459,531,483, of which more than $1,500,000 was in gold. Nearly all the stock was in circulation. The close of the year saw a little more than $3,000,000,000 in use.

WAS BOUND TO DIE.

Kills Himself With a Razor as Mother Tries to Prevent.

New York, Oct. 3.—With his mother frantically endeavoring to restrain him, Dr. Hubert Gudger, of Ashville, N. C., committed suicide yesterday afternoon by cutting his throat with a razor in a room at the Grand Union hotel.

Dr. Gudger was graduated from the School of Medicine of the University of Pennsylvania last June and returning home broke down from overwork. It had been intended to place him in a sanitarium today.

Both father and mother accompanied the young man to the city and watched him closely lest he carry out the purpose of self-destruction with which he seemed possessed.

Mrs. Gudger persuaded her husband to go for a walk, leaving her alone on guard. She must have dozed, for the next she knew she heard her son moving about in his room.

With a scream the mother rushed to her son's side, but he pushed her away and though she still clung to his arm he raised his hand to his throat and slashed himself with such force that the blade of the razor snapped. He died in ten minutes.

FLAME LURES BUG FROM EAR.

Surgeons Not Needed to Get Insect From Head.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 3.—Those long, shiny instruments that doctors poke into your ear when a little bug makes a mistake and gets into it, aren't necessary to show the bug the error of its way. All you need is a box of matches.

John Sanders, of Colwyn, made this discovery. Yesterday a bug crawled into his ear. After surgeons had endeavored to extract the bug a friend struck a match and held it close to the ear to get a better view. The pain stopped. When the flame went out the pain began again.

"Light another match," begged Sanders. The friend did, and a dozen after that. Presently the bug, responding to the light, emerged and was killed.

RECIPES.

Olive Salad

Mash two anchovies and add them to French dressing. Stone twenty-four olives and chop them rather fine. Cut one boiled potato and one boiled beet into dice. Chop a small cucumber pickle. Line a salad bowl with lettuce leaves, sprinkle over the gherkin, then the olives, then the beet and potato. Dust with salt, paprika and white pepper. Chop two hard boiled eggs very fine and place them over the top. Sprinkle with three tablespoonsful of sherry wine, pour over the French dressing, toss and serve.

Nut Custard Tart.

One-quarter of a pound of ground chestnuts, one-quarter of a pound of sugar, one-quarter of a pound of butter, one pint of milk, three eggs. Beat the eggs and sugar well together, melt and add the butter, then the ground nuts and lastly the milk. Pour into a double boiler and stir over the fire until the mixture thickens. Line some patty pans with rich paste, nearly full with the cooked mixture and bake in a moderate oven.

Baked Cucumbers.

Peel good sized cucumbers, cut them in two lengthwise, and remove the seeds. For three cucumbers allow three-quarters of a cupful of soft bread crumbs, one heaping tablespoonful of butter, melted, one teaspoonful of finely chopped onion, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of cayenne. Fill each half with the mixture, heap it on over the top, lay on a buttered pan and bake in a quick oven until the cucumbers are tender.

Quince Dessert.

Cut a slice from the blossom and stem end of six quinces, put them into a dish with enough water to cover up to half the depth of the quinces. Cover with another dish and bake in a moderate oven until the fruit is quite soft. Then lift them out and place them in a glass dish. Put half a heaping tablespoonful of powdered gelatine into a saucepan, add two and a half cupfuls of boiling water, the liquor from the dish in which the quinces were baked half a cupful of sugar and one teaspoonful of coriander seeds. Stir over the fire until they boil, strain and cool, then pour over the quinces. When ready to serve put a teaspoonful of red currant jelly on the top of each quince. Decorate with whipped and sweetened cream, flavored with half a teaspoonful of almond extract.

OUR SHORT STORY PAGE

by JACK LONDON

He weighed one hundred and ten pounds. His hair was kinky and negroid, and he was black. He was peculiarly black. He was neither blue-black nor purple-black, but plum-black. His name was Mauki, and he was the son of a chief. He had three tambo, and he was first cousin to that Polynesian word. Mauki's three tambo were as follows: First, he must never shake hands with a woman, nor have a woman's hand touch him or any of his personal belongings. Secondly, he must never eat clams nor any food from a fire in which clams had been cooked. Thirdly, he must never touch a crocodile, nor travel in a canoe that carried any part of a crocodile, even if only as large as a tooth.

Of a different black were his teeth, which were deep-black, or, perhaps better, lump black. They had been made so in a single night, by his mother, who had compressed about seven powdered minerals which were dug from the hebe-de-mer back of Port Adams. Port Adams is a salt-water village on Malaita, and Malaita is the most savage island in the Solomon group.

So savage that no trader nor planter has yet gained a foothold on it; while, from the time of the earliest hebe-de-mer fishers and sandalwood traders down to the latest labor recruiters equipped with automatic rifles and gasoline engines, scores of white adventurers have been passed out by tomahawks and soft-nosed Snider bullets.

Mauki's ears were pierced, not in one place, nor two places, but in a couple of dozen places. In one of the smaller holes he carried a slay pipe. The larger holes were too large for such use. The bowl of the pipe would have fallen through. In fact, in the largest hole in each ear he habitually wore round, wooden plugs that were an even four inches in diameter. Roughly speaking, the circumference of said holes was four and one-half inches. Mauki was a catholic in his tastes. In the various smaller holes he carried such things as empty rifle cartridges, brass-nails, copper screws, pieces of string, braids of coconut, strips of green leaf, and, in the cool of the day, scarlet hibiscus flowers.

Mauki's father was chief over the village at Port Adams, and thus, by birth a salt-water man. Mauki was half-cannibal. He knew the way of the fishes and oysters, and the reef was an open book to him. Canoes, also, he knew. He learned to swim when he was a year old. At seven years he could hold his breath a full minute and swim straight down to bottom through thirty feet of water. And at seven years he was stolen by the bushmen, who cannot even swim and who are afraid of salt water. Thereafter Mauki saw the sea only from a distance, through rifts in the jungle and from open spaces on the high mountain sides.

He became the slave of old Panfoa, head chief over a score of scattered bush villages on the range-tips of Malaita, the smoke of which, on calm mornings, is about the only evidence the seafaring white men have of the teeming interior population. For the whites do not penetrate Malaita.

When Mauki was a young man of seventeen, Panfoa got out of tobacco. He got dreadfully out of tobacco. It was hard times in all his villages. He had been guilty of a mistake. Sea was a harbor so small that a large schooner could not swing at anchor in it. It was surrounded by mangroves that overhung the deep water. It was a trap, and into the trap sailed two white men in a small ketch. They were after recruits, and they possessed much tobacco and trade goods, to say nothing of three rifles and plenty of ammunition. Now there were no salt-water men living at Sna, and it was there that the bushmen could come down to the sea. The ketch did a splendid trade. It signed on twenty recruits the first day. Even old Panfoa signed on. And that same day the score of new recruits chopped off the two white men's heads, killed the boat's crew, and burned the ketch.

Thereafter, and for three months, there was tobacco and trade goods in plenty and to spare in all the bush villages. Then came the man-of-war, that three-shells for miles into the hills, frightening the people out of their villages and into the deeper bush. Next the man-of-war sent landing parties ashore. The villages were all burned, along with the tobacco and trade stuff.

It taught Panfoa a lesson, but in the meantime he was out of tobacco. Also, his young men were too frightened to sign on with the recruiting vessels. That was why Panfoa ordered his slave, Mauki, to be carried down and signed on for half a case of tobacco advance, along with knives, axes, calico and beads, which he would pay for with his toil on the plantations. Mauki was sorely frightened when they brought him on board the schooner. He was a lamb led to the slaughter.

White men were ferocious creatures. They had to be, or else they would not make a practice of venturing along the Malaita coast and into all harbors, two on a schooner, when each schooner carried from fifteen to twenty blacks as boat's crew, and often as high as sixty or seventy black recruits. After many days on the schooner, and after beholding more land and islands than he had ever dreamed of, he was landed on New Georgia and put to work in the field clearing jungle and cutting cane grass. For the first time he knew what work was. Even as a slave to Panfoa he had not worked like this. And he did not like work. It was up at dawn and in at dark, on two men's a day. And the food was tiresome. For weeks at a time they were given nothing but sweet potatoes to eat, and for weeks at a time it would be nothing but rice.

Among other things he learned hebe-de-mer English, with which he could talk with all white men, and with all recruits who otherwise would have talked in a thousand different dialects. Also, he learned certain things about the white men, principally that they kept their word. If they told a boy he was going to receive a stick of tobacco, he got it. If they told a boy they would knock seven bells out of him if he did a certain thing, when he did that thing seven bells invariably were knocked out of him. Mauki did not know what seven bells were, but they occurred in hebe-de-mer, and he imagined them to be the blood and teeth that sometimes accompanied the process of knocking out seven bells. One other thing he learned: no boy was struck or punished unless he did wrong. Even when the white men were drunk, as they were frequently, they never struck unless a rule had been broken.

Mauki did not like the plantation. He hated work, and he was the son of a chief. Furthermore, it was ten years since he had been stolen from Port Adams by Panfoa, and he was homesick. He was even homesick for the slavery under Panfoa. So he ran away. He struck back into the bush, with the idea of working southward to the beach and stealing a canoe in which to go home to Port Adams. But the fever got work it out, which meant six months' additional toil. Further, his share of the stolen tobacco earned him another year of toil. Port Adams was now three years and a half away, so he stole a canoe one night, hid on the islets in Manning Straits, passed through the Straits, and began working along the eastern coast of Isabel, only to be captured, two thirds of the way along, by the white men on Merings Lagoon. After a week he escaped from them and took to the bush. There were no bush natives on Isabel, only salt-water men who were all Christians. The white men put up a reward of five hundred sticks of tobacco, and every time Mauki ventured down to the sea to steal a canoe he was chased by the salt-water men.

Four months of this passed, when the reward having been raised to a thousand sticks, he was caught and sent back to New Georgia and the road-building gang. Now a thousand sticks are worth fifty dollars, and Mauki had to pay the reward himself, which required a year and eight months' labor. So Port Adams was now five years away.

His homesickness was greater than ever, and it did not appeal to him to settle down and be good, work out his four years, and go home. The next time he was caught in the very act of running away. His case was brought before Mr. Hareby, the island manager of the Moonlight Soap Company, who adjudged him an incorrigible. The company had plantations on the Santa Cruz Islands, hundreds of miles across the sea, and there it sent its Solomon Islanders' laborers. And there Mauki was sent, though he never arrived. The schooner stopped at Santa Anna, and in the night Mauki swam ashore, where he stole two rifles and a case of tobacco from the trader and got away in a canoe to Cristoval.

Malaita was now to the north, fifty or sixty miles away. But when he attempted the passage he was caught by a light gale and driven back to Santa Anna, where the trader clapped him in irons and held him against the return of the schooner from Santa Cruz. The two rifles the trader recovered, but the case of tobacco was charged up to Mauki at the rate of another year. The sum of years he now owed the company was six.

On the way back to New Georgia the schooner dropped anchor in Marau Sound, which lies at the southeastern extremity of Guadalcanar. Mauki swam ashore with handcuffs on his wrists and got away to the bush. The schooner went on, but the Moonlight trader ashore offered a thousand sticks, and to him Mauki was brought by the bushmen with a year and eight months' labor on it. Again, and this time in a whaleboat accompanied by a case of the trader's tobacco. But a northwest gale wrecked him upon a reef, where the Christian natives stole his tobacco and turned him over to the Moonlight trader who resided there. The tobacco the natives stole meant another year for him, and the tale was now eight years and a half.

"We'll send him to Lord Howe," said Mr. Hareby. "Buster is there, and we'll let them settle it between them. It will be a case. I imagine, of Mauki getting Buster, or Buster getting Mauki, and good riddance in either event."

Nobody ever comes to Lord Howe, or Ontong-Java, as it is sometimes called. Thomas Cook & Son do not sell tickets to it and tourists do not dream of its existence. Not even a white missionary has landed on its shore. Its five thousand natives are as peaceable as they are primitive. Yet they were not always peaceable. The "Sailing Directions" speak of them as hostile and treacherous. But the men who compile the "Sailing Directions" have never heard of the change that was worked in the hearts of the inhabitants, who, not many years ago, cut off a big bark and killed all survivors with the exception of the second mate. This survivor carried the news to his brothers. The captains of three trading schooners returned with him to Lord Howe. They sailed their vessels right into the lagoon and proceeded to preach the white man's gospel that only white men shall kill white men, and that the lesser breeds must keep hands off.

The schooners sailed up and down the lagoon, harrying and destroying. There was no escape from the narrow sand circle, no bush to which to flee. The men were shot down at sight, and there was no avoiding being sighted. The villages were burned, the canoes smashed, the chickens and pigs killed, and the precious coconut trees chopped down. For a month this continued, when the schooners sailed away; but the fear of the white man had been sown into the souls of the islanders and never again were they rash enough to harm one.

Max Buster was the one white man on Lord Howe, trading in the pay of the ubiquitous Moonlight Soap Company. And the company billeted him on Lord Howe, because, next to getting rid of him, it was the most out-of-the-way place to be found. The company did not get rid of him was due to the difficulty of finding another man to take his place. He was a scrapping big German, with something wrong in his brain. Semi-madness would be a charitable statement of his condition. He was a bully and a coward, and a thrice bigger savage than any savage on the island. Being a coward, his brutality was of the cowardly order.

When he first went into the company's employ he was stationed on Sava. When a consumptive Colonial was sent to take his place, he beat him up with his fists and sent him off a wreck in the schooner that brought him.

Mr. Hareby next selected a young Yorkshire giant to relieve Buster. The Yorkshire man had a reputation as a bruiser and preferred fighting to eating. But Buster wouldn't fight. He was a regular little lamb—for ten days, at the end of which time the Yorkshire man was prostrated by an attack of fever. Then Buster went for him, among other things getting him down and jumping on him a score or so of times. Afraid of what would happen when his victim recovered, Buster fled away in a cutter to Gavutu, where he signified himself by beating up a young Englishman already crippled by a Boer bullet through both legs.

Then it was that Mr. Hareby sent Buster to Lord Howe, the failing-off place. He celebrated his landing by mopping up half a case of gin and by thrashing the elderly and wheezy mate of the schooner which had brought him. When the schooner departed he called the kanakas down to the beach and challenged them to throw him in a wrestling bout, promising a case of tobacco to the one who succeeded. Three kanakas he threw, but was promptly thrown by a fourth, who, instead of receiving the tobacco, got a bullet through his lungs.

And so began Buster's reign on Lord Howe. Three thousand people lived in the principal village; but it was deserted, even in broad day, when he passed through. Men, women and children fled before him. Even the dogs and pigs got out of the way, while the king was not above hiding under a mat. The two prime ministers lived in terror of Buster, who never discussed any moot subject, but struck out with his fists instead.

Mauki had no idea of the sort of master he was to work for. He had had no warnings, and he had concluded, as a matter of course, that Buster would be like other white men, a drinker of much whisky, a ruler and a lawgiver who always kept his word and who never struck a boy undeserved. Buster had the advantage. He knew all about Mauki, and gloated over his coming into possession of him. The last cook was suffering from a broken arm and a dislocated shoulder, so Buster made Mauki cook and general house boy.

And Mauki soon learned that there were white men and white men. On the very day the schooner departed he was ordered to buy a chicken from Samisee, the native Tongan missionary. But Samisee had sailed across the lagoon and would not be back for three days. Mauki returned with the information. He climbed the steep stairway (the house stood on piles twelve feet above the sand) and entered the living room to report. The trader demanded the chicken. Mauki opened his mouth to explain the missionary's absence. But Buster did not care for explanations. He struck out with his fist. The blow caught Mauki on the mouth and lifted him into the air. Clear through the doorway he flew, across the narrow veranda, breaking the top railing, and down to the ground. His lips were a contused, shapeless mass, and his mouth was full of blood and broken teeth.

"That'll teach you that back talk don't go with me," the trader shouted, purple with rage, peering down at him over the broken railing.

Mauki had never met a white man like this, and he resolved to walk small. He saw the boat boys knocked about and one of them put in irons for three days, with nothing to eat, for the crime of breaking a rowlock while pulling. Then, too, he heard the gossip of the village and learned why Buster had taken a third wife—by force, as was well known. The first and second wives lay in the graveyard, under the white coral sand, with slabs of coral rock at heads and feet. They had died, it was said, from beatings ill-used, as Mauki could see for himself.

But there seemed no way by which to avoid offending the white man, who seemed offended with life. When Mauki kept silent he was struck and called a sullen brute. When he spoke he was struck for giving back talk. When he was grave, Buster accused him of plotting and gave him a thrashing in advance; and when he strove to be cheerful and to smile, he was charged with sneering at his lord and master and given a taste of stick. Buster was a devil. The village would have done for him, had it not remembered the lesson of the three schooners. It might have done for him anyway, if there had been a bush to which to flee. As it was, the murder of the white man, of any white man, would bring a man-of-war that would kill the offenders and chop down the precious coconut trees. Then there were the boat boys, with minds fully made up to drown him by accident at the first opportunity to capsize the cutter. Only Buster saw to it that the boat did not capsize.

Mauki was of a different breed, and, escape being impossible while Buster lived, he was resolved to get the white man. The trouble was that he could never find a chance. Buster was always on guard. Day and night his revolvers were ready to hand. He permitted nobody to pass behind his back, as Mauki learned after having been knocked down several times. Buster knew that he had more to fear from the good-natured, even sweet-faced, Malaita boy than from the entire population of Lord Howe; and it gave zest to the programme of torment he was carrying out. And Mauki walked small, accepted his punishments, and waited.

All other white men had respected his tambo, but not so Buster. Mauki's weekly allowance of tobacco was two sticks. Buster passed them to his woman and ordered Mauki to receive them from her hand. But this could not be, and Mauki went without his tobacco. In the same way he was made to wait many a meal, and to go hungry many a day. He was ordered to make chowder out of the big clams that grew in the lagoon. This he could not do, for clams were tambo. Six times in succession he refused to touch the clams, and six times he was knocked senseless. Buster knew that the boy would die first, but called his refusal mutiny and would have killed him had there been another cook to take his place.

One of the trader's favorite tricks was to catch Mauki's kinky locks and bat his head against the wall. Another trick was to catch Mauki unawares and thrust the live end of a clear against his flesh. This Buster called vaccination, and Ma' was vaccinated a number of times a week. Once, in a rage, Buster ripped the cap handle from Mauki's nose, hearing the hole clear out of the cartilage.

"Oh, what a muzz!" was his comment, when he surveyed the damage he had wrought.

The skin of a shark is like sandpaper, but the skin of a ray fish is like a rasp. In the South Seas the natives use it as a wood file in smoothing down canoes and paddles. Buster had a mitt made of ray-fish skin. The first time he tried it on Mauki, with one sweep of the hand it peeled the skin off his back from neck to arm pit. Buster was delighted. He gave his wife a taste of the mitten, and tried it thoroughly on the boat boys. The prime ministers came in for a stroke each, and they had to grin and take it for a joke. "Laugh, curse you, laugh!" was the cue he gave.

Mauki came in for the largest share of the mitten. Never a day passed without a caress from it. There were times when the loss of so much outside kept him awake at night, and often the half-healed surface was raised raw afresh by the fabled Mr. Buster. Mauki continued his patient wait, secure in the knowledge that sooner or later his time would come. And he knew just what he was going to do when the time did come.

One morning Buster got up in a mood for knocking seven bells out of the universe. He began on Mauki and wound up on Mauki, in the interval knocking down his wife and hammering all the boat boys. At breakfast he called the coffee boys and threw the scalding contents of the cup into Mauki's face. By ten o'clock Buster was shivering with rage, and half an hour later he was burning with fever. It was no ordinary attack. It quickly became perilous, and developed into black-water fever. The days passed, and he grew weaker and weaker, never leaving his bed. Mauki waited and waited, the while his skin grew intact once more. He ordered the boys to beach the cutter, scrub her bottom, and give her a general overhauling. They thought the order emanated from Buster, and they obeyed. But Buster at the time was lying unconscious and giving no orders. This was Mauki's chance, but still he waited.

When the worst was past, and Buster lay convalescent and conscious, but weak as a baby, Mauki packed his few trinkets, including the china cup handle, into his trade box. Then he went over to the village and interviewed the king and his two prime ministers.

"This fella Buster," him good fella you like too much?" he asked.

They explained in one voice that they liked the trader not at all. The ministers poured forth a re- tidal of all the indignities and wrongs that had been heaped upon them. The king broke down and wept. Mauki interrupted, rudely:

"You save me—the big fella marster my country. You no like in this fella white marster. Me no like him. Plenty good you put hundred coconut, two hundred coconut, three hundred coconut along cutter. Him finish, you go sleep 'n good fella. After- gether kanakas sleep 'n good fella. Blue by big fella noise along house, you no save hear 'n that fella noise. You altogether sleep strong fella too much."

In like manner Mauki interviewed the boat boys. Then he ordered Buster's wife to return to her family house. Had she refused he would have been in a quandary, for his tambo would not have permitted him to lay hands on her.

The house deserted, he entered the sleeping room where the trader lay in a doze. Mauki first removed the trader's hand, then placed the ray-fish mitten on his hand. Buster's first wailing was a stroke of the mitten that removed the skin the full length of his nose.

"Good fella, eh?" Mauki grinned, between two strokes, one of which swept the forehead bare and the other of which cleaned off one side of his face. "Laugh, curse you, laugh!"

Mauki did his housework, heard the "big fella noise" biling in their houses, and continued to make for an hour or more.

When Mauki was done, he carried the boat compass and all the rifles and ammunition down to the cutter, which he proceeded to ballast with cases of tobacco. It was while engaged in this that a hideous, skinless thing came out of the house and ran screaming down the beach till it fell in the sand and moved and gibbered under the scorching sun. Mauki looked toward it and hesitated. Then he went over and removed the head, which he strapped in a mat and stowed in the storeroom of the cutter.

So soundly did the kanakas sleep through that long, hot day that they did not see the cutter run out through the passage and head south, close-hauled on the south-east trade. Nor was the cutter ever sighted on that long tack to the shores of Isabel, and during the tedious head-bent from there to Malaita. He landed at Port Adams with a wealth of rifles and tobacco such as no one man had ever possessed before. But he did not stop there. He had taken a white man's head, and only the bush could shelter him. So back he went to the bush villages, where he shot old Panfoa and half a dozen of the chief men, and made himself the chief over all the villages. When his father died, Mauki's brother ruled in Port Adams, and joined to- gether salt-water men and bushmen, the resulting combination was the strongest of the two-score fighting tribes of Malaita.

More than his fear of the British Government was Mauki's fear of the all-powerful Moonlight Soap Company; and one day a message came up to him in the bush, reminding him that he owed the company eight and one-half years of labor. He sent back a favorable answer, and then appeared the inevitable white man, the captain of the schooner, the bush and came out alive. This man not only came out, but he brought with him seven hundred and fifty dollars in gold sovereigns—the money price of eight years and a half of labor plus the cost price of rifles and cases of tobacco.

Mauki no longer weighs one hundred and ten pounds. His stomach is three times its former size, and he has four wives. He has many other things—rifles and revolvers, the handle of a china cup, and an excellent collection of bushmen's heads. But more precious than the entire collection is another head, perfectly dried and cured, with sandy hair and a yellowish beard, which is kept wrapped in the finest of fiber lava-lavas. When Mauki goes to war with villages beyond his realm he invariably gets out this head, and alone in his brass-voiced contemplates it long and solemnly. At such times the bush of death falls on the village, and not even a pickaninny dares make a noise. The head is colored the most powerful devil-devil on Malaita, and in the possession of it is ascribed all of Mauki's greatness.

The house deserted, he entered the sleeping room where the trader lay in a doze. Mauki first removed the trader's hand, then placed the ray-fish mitten on his hand. Buster's first wailing was a stroke of the mitten that removed the skin the full length of his nose.

"Good fella, eh?" Mauki grinned, between two strokes, one of which swept the forehead bare and the other of which cleaned off one side of his face. "Laugh, curse you, laugh!"

Mauki did his housework, heard the "big fella noise" biling in their houses, and continued to make for an hour or more.

When Mauki was done, he carried the boat compass and all the rifles and ammunition down to the cutter, which he proceeded to ballast with cases of tobacco. It was while engaged in this that a hideous, skinless thing came out of the house and ran screaming down the beach till it fell in the sand and moved and gibbered under the scorching sun. Mauki looked toward it and hesitated. Then he went over and removed the head, which he strapped in a mat and stowed in the storeroom of the cutter.

So soundly did the kanakas sleep through that long, hot day that they did not see the cutter run out through the passage and head south, close-hauled on the south-east trade. Nor was the cutter ever sighted on that long tack to the shores of Isabel

NEWFOUNDLAND DOG'S BARK AIDS SCHOONER TO WIN RACE IN FOG

The Florence E. Stream Defeats the Sunshine and the Esther Anita—All Three Laden With Good Cargoes of Bluefish—Rufus T.'s Canine Music Through Megaphone Enabled Craft to Make Best Time.

THE BLUE FISHING FLEET.

New York, Oct. 3.—When the Sunshine, the Esther Anita and the Florence E. Stream, smart fishing schooners, arrived in port from the blue-fishing grounds, it ended a race for first selling honors at the Fulton market, which was won by the Florence E. Stream, Captain John Hagan, by virtue of the process of Rufus T., a huge Newfoundland dog.

The three true vessels got away from the fishing grounds at about the same time, but an hour after they had gotten under way a fog set in that obscured the views of the three skippers and made headway almost impossible.

Captain Hagan, however, with his mate, Andrew Johnson, had Rufus T. on board, and Rufus T. was depended on to save the day for the Florence E. Stream. Mate Johnson had, some time previously, provided a megaphone for Rufus T. so as to utilize the barking of the Newfoundland, which had been going to waste, like the waters of Niagara. The megaphone served the double purpose of megaphone at sea and muzzle ashore, for Rufus T. does not feel above an occasional bite of a sailor's raiment when the opportunity offers.

As the three fishing schooners left their uncertain course toward New York Captain Anders, of the Sunshine, and Captain Albin, of the Esther Anita, were considerably handicapped because they had nothing on board sufficiently noisy to warn others of their presence on the high seas.

On the Florence E. Stream, on the contrary, Rufus T. was harnessed to his megaphone and Captain Hagan's little vessel skinned through the inky haze without fear, for his canine fog horn worked perfectly under the guidance of Mate Johnson, who poked Rufus T. in the ribs whenever there seemed to be a break in the continuous howl through the megaphone muzzle. "We did not have to poke him very much," said Mate Johnson. "That dog knows about as well as any of us that he is the fog horn on the Florence E. Stream, as well as the ship's mascot. By his aid we got through the fog ahead of the Sunshine and the Anita and we got the inner berth at the wharf."

The Florence E. Stream's contribution to the day's bluefish receipts was about 5,500 fish. The other two schooners, trailing in the wake of the Hagan craft, brought another 10,000 bluefish, so that the market was fairly well provided by the three crews.

While the Florence E. Stream was still gathering in the bluefish a commotion near the schooner attracted the attention of the crew. The water was churned into a fury just forward of the bowsprit, and then there was a thud that shook the little schooner as if she had brought up on a mud bank. Investigation showed that a swordfish had attacked and been attacked by porpoises and had become entangled in the ropes and anchor chain dangling from the bow.

Two of the schooner's crew got the swordfish free, but failed to land him. When the Florence E. Stream was securely moored to her wharf an examination was made of the schooner's bow and it was found that the swordfish had left his mark on the vessel in the shape of a cut a foot long and three inches deep.

"If he had continued as he began," said Mate Johnson, "that swordfish would have saved us in half lengthwise, and a fine looking bluefish schooner we would have been."

NOTES OF THE DAY.

The scarcest of all British postage stamps is the two-penny stamp of a new design which was ready for issue at the time of King Edward's death. It was not placed on sale, and the postmaster general has decided to destroy the entire stock, with the exception of a few specimens for King George's album, the British museum and the postoffice museum at St. Martin's-le-Grand.

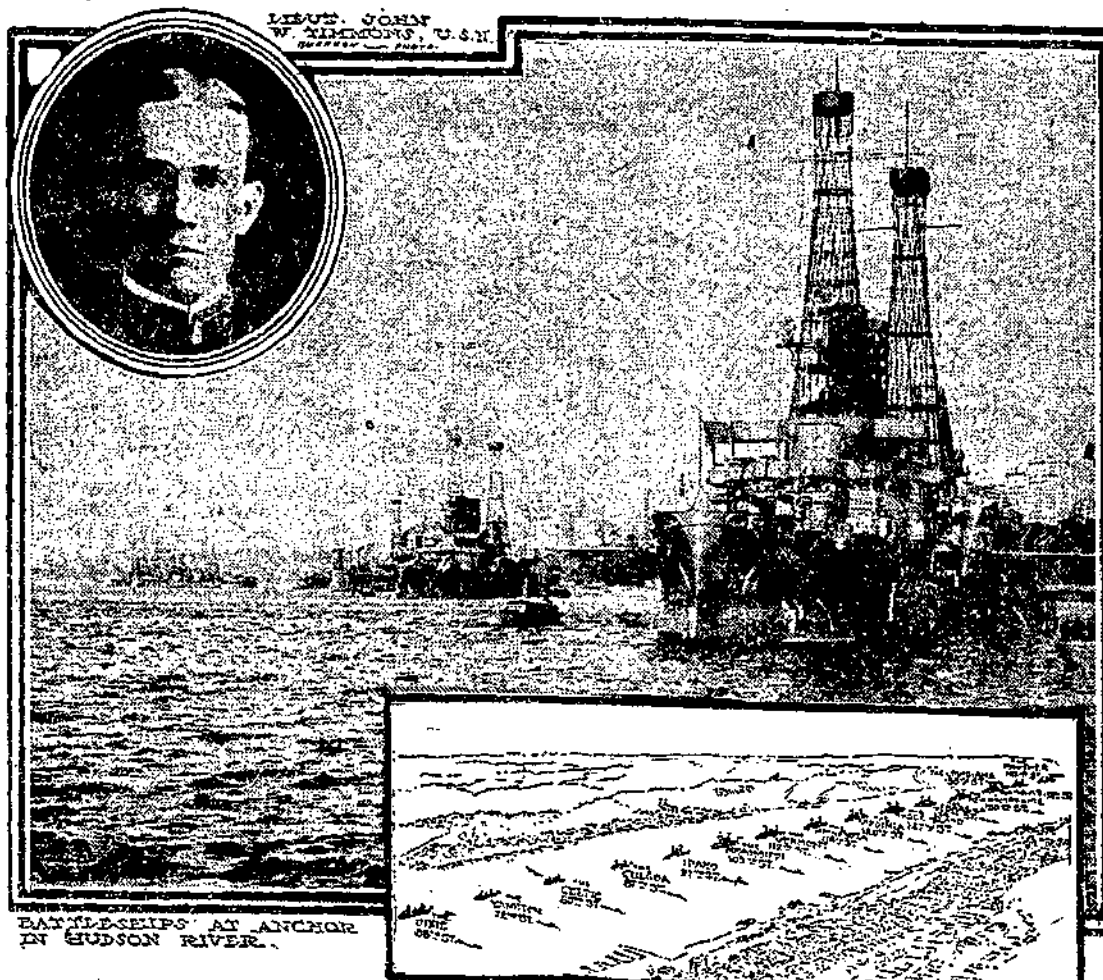

The autumn theatrical season in London has opened with the production of a new American play. How is it that almost all these plays represent American life as a sort of banishment to an accompaniment of weird swear words and yells, while the Americans themselves, old, young or middle-aged, are shown as amazing cranks living in a sort of nervous crisis of high spirits and college-rag mischief-making of an infantile sort?—London Opinion.

The Russian government is considering a thorough improvement of the inland waterway system in its European provinces. This is to include direct communication between the Baltic sea and the Caspian and Black seas, which will revolutionize economic conditions and greatly benefit the Moscow district, Russia's most important commercial center. The total estimated cost is $2,825,000, to be raised abroad. Annual maintenance and interest will cost for $2,500,000. At an extra cost of $2,500,000 the Baltic water can be made a direct 1000-mile waterway and those of the Dnieper 1500-mile waterway. Revenue, including tolls, will be $10,000,000 a year.

Written from German Africa, a European tourist says: "We found here in the dense forest, among people who know nothing of modern scientific discoveries or of time and labor-saving inventions, a good and practical wireless telephone. The natives have for purposes of ceremony, peaceful and warlike, drums of various dimensions made of wood and then, when beaten, emit sounds of about an octave in range. Aside from the ceremonies the drums are used also as means of communication, and the means of striking the number of strokes the natives, etc., make up words and sentences which are readily understood for miles around. We had a proof of it one day. Our caravan was ready to start when our head servant stopped suddenly in his work, listened intently and then gave unmistakable signs of pleasure. We learned later that the indistinct sounds conveyed to him the news that a boy had been born to his brother in a neighboring village."

At a desert station on the Southern Pacific railway an old Indian has been playing a harp upon the stopping of every through train, gathering in coin from the passengers, ever since the road was built. In dress and other appearance he is all over the Indian of tribal antiquity. But when there are no outsiders about he is a leading citizen, his ancient harp making him a financial prince of the desert.—New York Press.

WAR MONSTERS RENDEZVOUS IN GOTHAM HARBOR.

BATTLESHIPS AT ANCHOR IN HUDSON RIVER.

SHOWING POSITION OF BATTLESHIPS IN A NORTH VIEW.

New York, Oct. 3.—That little red pennant with the black ball which waves over the best gunners in the United States navy, and possibly the best in the world, soon may be fluttering from the basket mast of the battleship Idaho.

With nine other battleships of the Atlantic fleet, the Idaho is now in the Hudson, and the 500 or more men on board are talking of little besides the target practice trophy. It means that prize money and medals will be distributed among the men, congratulatory letters and marks of distinction among the officers, and altogether the Idaho will be a first-class ship for a man to be attached to.

Fully 4,000 bluejackets are ashore taking in the sights. The men are an orderly, well-behaved lot and were received with open arms wherever they went.

On board the Vermont the crew is busily figuring on its score at the battle practice just finished on the southern drill grounds, trying to find a fraction of a percentage somewhere which will entitle it to keep the black-balled gunnery pennant, but it seems hopeless. The Delaware also has been making a wavering claim to the honor, but nearly all the officers admit that the Idaho will be the winner.

No one on board the fleet is more eager over the decision than is Lieutenant John W. Timmons, gunnery officer of the Idaho. The remarkable showing of the vessel is considered largely due to the manner in which he has drilled his men.

NEW STEP TAKEN IN THE PROGRESS OF CHINA

Newly Constituted Imperial Senate Holds Its First Formal Session.

Peking, China, Oct. 3.—China took another forward step today when at noon the newly constituted imperial senate was opened by the regent, Prince Chun. There was little or no ceremony to mark the historic event. In a brief address Prince Chun stated that the wish of the people was for a parliamentary government and he commanded the senators to labor for this consummation.

A parliamentary building of ample dimensions will be constructed, but pending its completion the sessions will be conducted in the rather narrow quarters of the law college.

Lack of room was given as the reason for the exclusion of representatives of the press today. The same rules were applied to outsiders, not even the members of the foreign diplomatic corps being invited to be present. The imperial senate constitutes the second stage in the development of a popular representative government. The first was the inauguration a year ago of a general parliament, which is promised for 1915.

ARMED GUARD FOR GIRL.

Outlaw Dietz's Daughter, Suffering Gunshot Wound, Is Removed.

Winter, Wis., Oct. 3.—Myra Dietz, the 21-year-old daughter of John L. Dietz, who was shot Saturday when Sheriff Madden and two deputies fired on the Dietz children as they were driving to this town, was carried on a cot to the baggage car of a train bound for Chippewa Falls hospital today. A score of special deputy sheriffs, armed with rifles stood about the train watching for John L. Dietz, who had threatened to come to town and prevent the officers from taking his daughter away.

ALASKA'S OUTPUT OF GOLD.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 3.—The first estimate of the season's gold output from Alaska, made from the Alaska-Yukon magazine, anticipates a reduction of more than $5,000,000 from last year's output of $26,000,000. The estimate is $18,000,000. The chief falling off is in the Fairbanks district. A considerable decrease of the Nome output is anticipated also.

STIMSON SEES ROOSEVELT.

New York Republican Standard Bearer Goes to Oyster Bay.

Oyster Bay, Oct. 3.—Henry L. Stimson, republican candidate for governor, motored from Cold Springs harbor, where he has a farm, to Oyster Bay this morning for a talk with Colonel Roosevelt. Neither Mr. Stimson nor Colonel Roosevelt cared to say anything of their conference beyond the fact that the campaign had been discussed.

Representative Nicholas Longworth, of Cincinnati, and Mrs. Longworth, who came to Oyster Bay on Friday, started for home on the train with Mr. Stimson. Mr. Longworth said that as soon as he reached Cincinnati he was to begin a campaign tour which would keep him busy until election time.

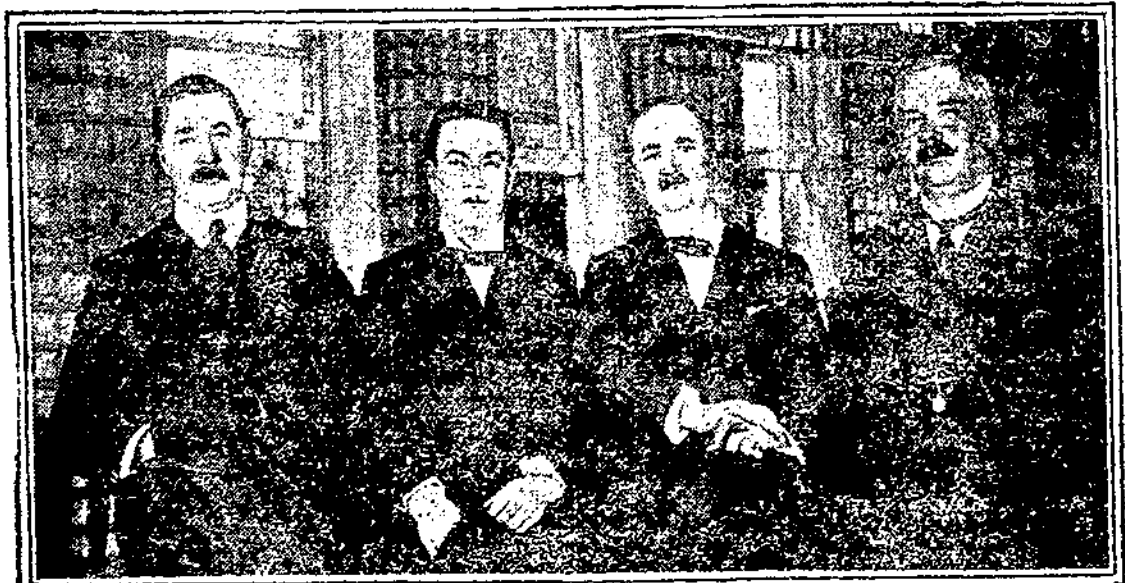

AUTO RECORDS BROKEN.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 3.—In the automobile racing at the Illinois state fair today, Kercher, driving a hundred horse power Darracq, broke the three mile circular track record of the state. Time, 2:47; Barney Oldfield, driving a Blitzen Benz, broke the one-mile state record. Time 54 flat. A heavy wind prevented a flight by Arch Hoxsey in a Wright biplane.

In 1830 Gunther made a list of all the known animal species. In 1851 another list was made and the two lists were compared. In 1859 there were about 78,550 species; in 1851 the number had increased to 311,653. And so the minimum yearly increase since then has been twelve thousand, about six hundred thousand are known at the present time. This is a large figure, but it is probable that it is insignificant compared with figures of the species as yet undiscovered.

WHOLE WORLD SMOKES PIPE

For Plain Comfort and Utility Ranks of Smokers Have Agreed on Handy Briar.

(Philadelphia North American.)

All the world is now smoking pipes. The statement is really news, although it looks as though another Vespucci were trying to discover America. All the world hasn't been addicted to the pipe hitherto. There was one big and highly important exception—France.

But at last even the ultra-particular Frenchman has come down to it, and the pipe can now claim universal endorsement by humanity—with highly honorable, if wrathful, exceptions allowed to those who feel convinced that tobacco is a device of Satan.

It has thus taken three full centuries for the odorous weed of the American Indians to live through all the twists and turns, disguises and metamorphoses and leaf and paper swaddlings which Caucasian inventiveness has loaded on it, and to return to the chaste simplicity of the pipe that was typical of its aboriginal smokers.

At Paris this season three times as many pipes have been sold as ever before; the consumption of straight smoking tobacco has made a record; clubmen have made quite a fad of the briar; college students have begun to sport the bulldog pipe; France has generally capitulated.

It looked for a while as though the affectation of British togs and American prize fighting were at the bottom of the sudden Gallic penchant for pipes at the expense of the dainty cigarette, the staggering cheroot and the delicious Havana. But even the more or less wealthy clubmen could not maintain the pose of a new fashion successfully.

The style and material of the world's pipes will scarcely be influenced by this new and important accession to the ranks of smokers, for plain comfort and utility have fully agreed on the handy briar as available for practically all the emergencies of civilization. No offense is meant to the honey-sweet, the classic cornucopia of the great American people, or to the frequently artistic carvings and the beautiful paintings that decorate the meerschaum and the porcelain pipes of Austria and Germany. One is as ready to admit that as fine a breed of men has been reared on the clay dudhean of Ireland as ever broke a continent to harness. But the briar seems to have the call these days with the great majority.

Strange and Wonderful Pipes.

The instant, however, one departs from the main traveled roads of this country and of Europe he encounters strange and wonderful pipes, pipes which represent marvelous diversities of national taste.

The Chinaman you see enjoying the fumes of a tiny, wide brass bowl at the end of a bamboo stick, with no more than half a dozen wafts to a pipeful, is inhaling smoke strong enough to knock him out if he were to use a man's size briar and keep it up for twenty minutes.

The Turk, with his architectural narghile, or hubble-bubble, may be smoking that delicate Turkish leaf which has been fertilized in growth from a neighboring poppy field, but he is straining it through the bowl of water and so reducing its nicotine poison to the lowest ebb. The East Indian hookah works on the same principle and takes the full force of both lungs to work the draught on it.

The use made in Bokhara, and get a handsome pipe out of the stone; a red clay in Algeria, and in Benares as well, not far removed from the American powhatan; queer clay models of bird forms among the Ashantees of Africa's west coast; a reed stemmed affair in Burma that has to be carried over the arm, and a giant emu foot in Australia.

Bone, wood, stone, glass, porcelain, brass, iron, clay—anything under the sun that won't burn—is utilized for pipes; yet all together cannot approach, in strangeness, two that come into play under utterly different skies—one near the north pole and the other under the equator, in Africa.

Smoking at 40 Degrees Below.

When a man tries to smoke a pipe in the Arctic, with the wind at thirty miles and hour and the temperature at 40 degrees below zero, he is certain to get his lips frozen and cracked. Yet the craving becomes as insupportable there as elsewhere. Alaska miners have developed the scheme of using the human body itself as their pipe. They bind tobacco under the armpits or just over the solar plexus, and make a fireless pipe of themselves, the nicotine that is absorbed satisfying the hunger for the weed.

In Africa—it was the wonderful Du Chetillu who observed it—the thick-lipped, promiscuous negroes are never at a loss for a pipe unless it be in the midst of pure sand. They use the world as their pipe bowl, and literally enjoy the biggest pipe in the universe, 25,000 miles in circumference. A tiny mound of heavily moistened clay soil is rounded up anywhere, with a stripped twig running from center to side. In the middle of the mound a hole is made with the tip of the hunking weapon known as the knob kerrie, the bottom of the hole reaching to the tip of the twig. The twig is withdrawn and the prospective smoker sits down for the torrid sun to bake his dampened clay. As soon as it is fairly hardened, he fills the hole with tobacco, applies his thick lips to the side of the little hole where the twig has left an aperture and, lying flat on his belly, has as fine a smoke as any white man ever drew from an expensive churchwarden.

Mrs. Minnie Ream Hoxie has just completed a statue of Governor Kirkwood for the state capitol of Iowa. Mrs. Hoxie is now sixty-three. She was only fifteen when she saw Presdent Lincoln and was so struck by his face and bearing that she modeled him in clay. A friend took her model to President Lincoln, who liked it so much that she was commissioned to execute a life size statue for the rotunda of the capitol. This statue so pleased him that he sat for a bust at the white house.

PENNSY SIGNAL SUPERVISOR

C. L. Bartholome Succeeds G. W. Hill in the Department.

NEW OFFICIAL IS FROM PITTSBURGH

Wabash Officials Here to Start Work at Old Depot.

C. L. Bartholome arrived in the city last night and this morning assumed the duties of signal supervisor of the Western division of the Pennsylvania, a position recently made vacant by the transfer of George W. Hill to the Eastern division, with headquarters at Pittsburgh. Mr. Bartholome is now looking around for a house and if he secures a suitable one, will at once bring his family here to reside. He comes from the office of W. McC. Grafton, superintendent of the signal department of the lines west of Pittsburgh.

JUST 2344 AT CHICAGO.

That Number of Fort Wayne People on the Excursion.

The total number of tickets sold Saturday on the week-end excursion to Chicago at the Pennsylvania and the Nickel Plate ticket offices in Fort Wayne was 2,344, beating all previous records by several hundred. Of the sales 1,599 were made by the Pennsylvania, and 745 by the Nickel Plate. The Sentinel has not been advised as to the total number of excursionists carried into Chicago Saturday by the two roads, but it is said to have passed the 4,000 mark. A good feature of the excursion was the arrival of all trains at Chicago on time and the absence of accidents to passengers or crews.

TRIP OVER INTERURBAN.

A. I. E. E. Members to Go to Lafayette.

The Fort Wayne division of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers will make an educational trip over the Fort Wayne and Wabash Valley traction line to Lafayette next Saturday on a special car. The trip is for the purpose of inspecting electric roadbeds and power stations and the traction company's plant at Lafayette will be inspected by the party. There will be twenty-five men in the party and their special car will leave the city at 11 o'clock Saturday morning.

FORMER WABASH MAN MARRIED.

The Illinois State Register publishes the following concerning a man formerly employed on the Wabash and well known in Wabash railway circles in this city: "Frank R. Higgins, late of this city, who recently left with Dr. E. A. Kartak for Sarasota, Fla., where they have a large orange orchard, has surprised his friends by bringing to Sarasota a wife. Mr. Higgins recently married at Tampa, Fla., Mrs. Louise Cleary, also a former resident of Springfield, and who has many friends here."

here. The news of the wedding was a surprise to friends in Springfield, as well as at Sarasota. Mr. Higgins before leaving Springfield was chief clerk to Master Mechanic Harry C. Rittinger, of the Wabash railroad. He left the service of the Wabash after being employed by that road thirty-two years in order to operate his orange farm in Florida.

WABASH OFFICIALS HERE.

Several of the Wabash officials were in the city today, chiefly on business connected with track elevation. Engineer E. A. Beck and an assistant were busy making measurements and setting stakes for changing the tracks at Calhoun to the position they will occupy when in the completed form. There will be only three tracks on the bridge, Mr. Beck said, but there will be four both east and west of the bridge and the water pipe for supplying passenger train locomotives will be placed just east of Calhoun street, near the site of the old standpipes. Other officials in the city were Supt. J. C. Sullivan, Division Engineer W. S. Dames and Traveling Engineer A. F. King. As soon as the tracks have been rearranged platforms will be built at the station.

SPECIAL FOR SHRINERS.

The Arab patrol of Shriners have engaged a special train to bring them down from their home city, Grand Rapids, to attend the mardi gras. Their train will consist of a combination car, two coaches and a Pullman car and will arrive here about 5 o'clock Wednesday evening. The party will remain until 1:30 o'clock Friday morning, when they will leave for their home. There will be upwards of 125 in the party. The Toledo Shriners, about 100 strong, have arranged to come to the mardi gras over the Lake Shore road, the company providing extra cars on the regular trains for them. All other roads, including the electric lines, are also providing extra equipment to handle the people who will come to the mardi gras.

WRECK ON C. & O.

The C. & O. road was blocked at Peru several hours last Saturday and several trains were detained via Marion and Wabash, over the Big Four and the Wabash roads. The unfortunate train was a fast freight, which had come to leave the tracks as it was crossing the Wabash river and plunged down into the stream. Fortunately nobody was on that part of the train and none was hurt, but the bridge and tracks were badly damaged and the road blocked.

RETURNS FROM WASHINGTON.

Chief Car Inspector Adam LaMar is at his desk again in the Pennsylvania office having after an absence of several months. Since June Mr. LaMar has been at Washington more or less of the time on business connected with the interstate commerce commission and the railways. His office comrades have given him the title of senator.

BACK FROM ENCAMPMENT.

Conductor Theodore Bley resumed charge of his switching crew and engine in the Pennsylvania yards this morning. He had been attending the G. A. R. encampment at Atlantic City and was gone two weeks. He says the encampment was one of the most enjoyable attended, and he was at nearly all of them.

DRAUGHTSMAN PROMOTED.

Otto Leimann, for some months employed in the draughting department of the Pennsylvania shops, with headquarters in the master mechanic's building, has been transferred to Chief Draughtsman William Stephan's office in the motive power office building. The change is a promotion for the young man.

SAM DUNBAR AT WORK.

Blacksmith Samuel Dunbar, who went to Sweetwater, Tenn., four or five weeks ago to visit relatives and was taken sick soon after reaching that place, has recovered and this morning resumed his place in the Pennsylvania shops.

SYRIAN HAS LEG HURT.

Mabel Abdulla, a Syrian laborer at the Bass foundry, sustained injuries to one of his legs Saturday, when a wheel, he was rolling fell against him and carried him to the ground. He will be off duty several days as a result of the accident.

HAD A TOE CRUSHED.

This morning, in attempting to get upon a train on the G. R. & L. road, brakeman A. Gerardot had the great toe of his right foot crushed when it got under the wheel of a moving car. He was taken to St. Joseph hospital, where the injured toe was amputated.

IN A NEW POSITION.

Frank Dale has been assigned to clerical duties in the store room at the Wabash shops. The young man is a telegraph operator and was thus engaged in the master mechanic's office during the absence of Operator J. H. Eysenberger the past two weeks.

BACK IN THE SHOP.

W. O. Bassett, a well known machinist, is again at work at the bench in the Pennsylvania shops. He has long been afflicted with a disease of the eyes and until today has not worked since the summer of 1907, over three years.

WABASH MACHINIST INJURED.

Archie League, of the Wabash machine shop, had his left thumb crushed this morning while at work in the shops. The digit will not be lost, but the injury will put him out of commission a week or more.

BRAKEMAN INJURED.

Wabash brakeman E. J. Riney sustained painful injury to his back Friday night, when struck by a switch stand while shifting cars at New Haven. He was taken to the hospital at Peru.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

Herbert N. Sutton and Thomas F. Kearney are new helpers at the Pennsylvania blacksmith shop.

Fred Paul, who had been sick a few days, resumed work in the Pennsylvania lumber yards this morning.

Boilermaker William A. Doerfer, Machinist's Helper W. H. Whittinger have taken employment at the Wabash shop.

Mrs. Potter, wife of Foreman Thomas Potter, of the Pennsylvania cabinet shop, is preparing for a visit with friends in Indianapolis the latter part of the week.

N. J. Maszerson, a Pennsylvania line worker, has resumed work at Dela, O., where he spent the greater portion of last week repairing the electrical part of the company's plant there.

Chief Engineer George Nautech, of the Pennsylvania power plant, is sick and off duty. Nickel Miller and George F. Bender, of the shops, are also off duty on account of sickness.

The students at the Fort Wayne Electric works have organized a bowling team, the eligible ones being only the students. "Germans" Schultz is the captain of the team.

E. A. Wagner, electrical engineer of the Fort Wayne Electric works, has returned from Kansas City, where he spent several days in the interest of the company.

Assistant General Foreman A. S. Courtney, of the Pennsylvania machine shop, resumed the duties of that office this morning. He had been spending a two weeks' vacation with his parents in Boston.

This morning Machinist H. J. Collis, of the Pennsylvania shops, went to Chicago to spend a week with friends.

Fred Stahl, gang foreman at the Pennsylvania erecting shop, was the guest Saturday and Sunday of friends out in the vicinity of Mayville.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Titus have returned from Kansas City, Mo., where they were called a week ago to attend the funeral of the wife of Mr. Titus' brother, which occurred last Thursday. Mr. Titus is a retired Pennsylvania engineer.

After an absence of ten days on account of sickness, Boilermaker William Heine resumed work at the Pennsylvania round house this morning. Jacob Newman also resumed his duties at the round house, after being sick a week.

The semi-annual inspection of watches on the Nickel Plate was begun last Saturday and will continue throughout the month. There are several thousands of watches to be inspected and the work will require quite a length of time.

The better class of the foreign element in the city are taking positions in the several big shops. This morning W. Zwickowski, S. Gierominski and W. Skladanowski took employment at the Pennsylvania shops. The last named is a carpenter and will work at repairing cars.

Thomas E. Gordon, who sustained painful injuries last August while participating in the Pennsylvania field day, was able to resume work in the Pennsylvania blacksmith shop this morning. E. H. Reiling and T. W. Skirke also resumed work at the blacksmith shop this morning after being sick two or three days.

If the supposed Hiram river bridge is ever constructed, says the Scientific American, it certainly will not be built at the proposed site at One-hundred-and-seventy-ninth street, for the probability here for the foundation, have been carried to a depth of 100 feet without discovering anything solid and sand. It is stated that a survey will be made at One-hundred-and-seventy-ninth street, which will include a determination of the nature of the river bottom.

THE MARKETS

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago Market.
Chicago, Oct. 3.—A big decrease in the amount of wheat on ocean passage had considerable to do with making prices advance here today. The lightness of shipments to Great Britain was reported to have led to some advance for distant supplies. There was fair competition buying here in consequence, and shorts were inclined to cover. The opening was unchanged to 1/2c higher with December extending over the entire range at 97c to 97 1/2c. Later the market touched 97 1/2c. Scattered purchases, some of them by cash houses, lent firmness to corn. December started 3/4c to 3/4c up at 49 1/2c to 49 1/2c, reacted to 49 1/2c and rallied to 49 1/2c to 49 1/2c.

Local selling caused an initial break of 1/2c to 2 1/2c in wheat, but a fair demand developed at the lower level. First sales of the January delivery were at $17.50 to $17.62 1/2 for pork, $10.60 for lard and $9.55 to $9.62 for rice.

SILHOUETTE ARTIST IN FORT WAYNE

Local People Will Have Opportunity to See Examples of an Ancient Art.

Your silhouette on a postal card is the latest development of the craze which has so increased the work of the true silhouette artist. There are but two of them in existence at present. One of them, Mr. A. H. Harrison, probably the one American who has attained proficiency in the art, is in the city for a few days.

Mr. Harrison, a former newspaper artist, takes a keen interest in this strange art. "It is a peculiar thing," he remarked yesterday when seen by a reporter, "but the word silhouette is so called, not only from an artist, but from a French statesman and financier, Etienne Silhouette. He lived about 1757. His extreme economy of administration greatly exasperated the Parisians who, in ridicule of him, pretended to take his advice. They cut their coats short and wore them without sleeves. They discarded their gold snuff boxes for rough wooden ones, and the portraits of the day were only profiles of the face, traced by a candle on white paper, and the fashion in time was called a la Silhouette. Poor Silhouette was driven into retirement, but the name still stuck to the form of portrait, which enjoyed great popularity throughout all Europe."

Mr. Harrison will sit in one of the display windows of Meyer Brothers Co. drug store, corner Calhoun and Wayne streets, this week and will execute the portraits of those who present themselves for a sitting. He will be attired in a handsome colonial costume and his work will undoubtedly attract much attention. Come and see how it is done in Meyer's window, corner Calhoun and Wayne streets.
